SCHEIB RULED BY "DESTRUCTIVE" DOCTRINE, POLICE BELIEVE

HARRY A. SCHEIB, accused of the bathtub murder, had become obsessed, the police believe, by a peculiar doctrine of a new creed which taught him to believe that there were two great forces in the world---constructive and destructive. While Scheib declares that only the constructive force dominated him, the police are of the belief that one of the teachings of his cult was that some things must be destroyed before construction can take place---in other words, if Scheib believed that his wife was an impediment to his constructive theory, his mystical belief would lead him to put her out of the way.

SAY DRUG WAS GIVEN MRS. BULL

ALFRED, Me., June 2.—On the day before Mrs. Ole Bull died at the Studio House, No. 108 Brattle street, Cambridge, on January 18, she was given champagne and two cups of coffee with cream for breakfast, according to a letter introduced at the continuation of the Bull trial today.

This item of the medicinal treatment of the dying woman born added interest on account of yesterday's testimony of a strange Hindu "tonic" which is said to have been administered to her.

Joseph G. Thorp, executor of the will and brother of Mrs. Bull, testified that this "tonic" was administered to Mrs. Bull by Miss Mairead Noble, known as "Sister Nivedita" in the Indian order to which she belongs.

It was the same "Sister Nivedita" who wrote to Olea Bull Vaughan, Mrs. Bull's daughter, who is contesting the will now, about the champagne and coffee for Mrs. Bull's breakfast on the day preceding her death.

"Champagne-Coffee" Letter.

This "champagne and coffee" letter was the last word Olea Bull Vaughn received of her mother's condition before Mrs. Bull died. In this letter Mrs. Bull was represented as "brighter," whereas, according to the daughter's contention, she was in a dying condition. In fact, Mrs. Bull did die the next day.

Sherman L. Whipple, counsel for Olea, questioned Joseph G. Thorp as to whether he had tried to coerce Olea against contesting her mother's will. After Thorp had made denials, Mr. Whipple said:

"I do not now wish to make any charge against Mr. Thorp, but I do contend that the evidence justifies my pursuing this line of inquiry."

"Mystic Letter" Shown.

Another feature of the session to-day was a so-called "mystic letter," shown by Mr. Whipple. It was a piece of white foolscap paper, penciled on each side. This was the first time that a "mystic message" was shown in a material form, though they have been mentioned previously. In the "champagne and coffee" letter from "Sister Nivedita" to Olea this sentence occurred:

"Some mystic message had reached her (Mrs. Bull) on Saturday night that the doors so long closed are now about to open."

Mr. Whipple asked Thorp if he knew Mrs. Bull was receiving "mystic messages" through Miss Cella Richmond, a friend of Mrs. Bull. Thorp said he didn't know it, nor had he found any mystic message in Miss Richmond's handwriting among Mrs. Bull's effects. A few minutes later Mr. Whipple showed this penciled foolscap, saying it was a mystic message from Ole Bull and from Edwina the dead child of Mrs. Vaughan and grandchild of Mrs. Bull, who has been mentioned as having appeared in a "pink radiance" to Mrs. Bull. The "mystic message" paper was not admitted as evidence to-day.

Roberto in Court.

The York County Probate Court, where the case is being tried, was opened by Judge Nathaniel Hobbs at 9 a. m. Among those present besides counsel were Nicola Roberto and Mrs. Edith Swanander and Miss Sibi Swanander, who have figured in the case. Joseph G. Thorp, friend of Mrs. Bull, Thorp said he didn't know it, nor had he found any mystic message in Miss Richmond's handwriting among Mrs. Bull's effects. A few minutes later Mr. Whipple showed this penciled foolscap, saying it was a mystic message from Ole Bull and from Edwina the dead child of Mrs. Vaughan and grandchild of Mrs. Bull, who has been mentioned as having appeared in a "pink radiance" to Mrs. Bull. The "mystic message" paper was not admitted as evidence to-day.

Begin Right With Your Baby

And Bear In Mind that the TIME TO BEGIN IS WHEN THE BABY IS BORN. Just a Few Words for Mammas and Papas and Grandmas

There was once a young mother who called her babe a "Most unreasonable child."

Was he a most unreasonable child?

Well, he was fretful and cross all day, but the fact is that he had been taken from his bed, asleep, on the night before, to be shown to a dear friend who couldn't call at any other time.

"He was only awake an hour, and he slept an hour later this morning," his mother explains. As if the hour later made up for the awakening and excitement and over-stimulation of midnight!

You will find the story of this "most unreasonable child," with stories about one hundred other babies—all typical—in the little book called "Modern Scientific Care, Training and Feeding of Children," a special supplement to the Boston Sunday AMERICAN of June 4. The book begins with the baby at birth:

The right kind of baby has no business to lie awake. If he does, something is wrong.

The baby's sleeping habits cannot be too early established. There's an old saying that a baby who is born in the morning is likely to sleep in the daytime, and a baby born in the evening will sleep in the night.

This is a simple theory, but it should not be allowed to interfere with the baby's practice. It is a comparatively easy matter to get a child into good sleeping habits if one will begin in time and be patient.

* * * *

One of the most potent causes of the baby's being awake so much is the lack of regularity in his sleeping habits. He must be started right in these. There must be no yielding to circumstances and letting him sleep when he feels like it and taken up and handled when he is so inclined.

More than this, there should not be a habit established of rocking him or singing him to sleep.

This sounds very harsh. We mothers are self-indulgent creatures after all, and it makes us so happy to cuddle our babies that we are glad to persuade ourselves it is the best thing in the world for them.

The book of thirty-two pages discusses the cradle, a "very picturesque piece of furniture, but not a sensible sleeping place for baby;" it treats of the bath; it tells just what to do when the baby wakes up in the middle of his nap. There is an entire chapter on the feeding of children and an enumeration of the "five reasons why the baby cries."

Every mother of a new baby in New England, and every father, too, not forgetting grandma, who is frequently the person in charge—will want a copy of "Modern Scientific Care, Training and Feeding of Children." This book can be got in one way only. It will be given away—absolutely free—with the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

GARY FOR FEDERAL CONTROL

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Judge E. H. Gary, executive head of the United States Steel corporation, resumed his testimony to-day before the Stanley committee conducting an inquiry to show that the corporation is a combination in restraint of trade. Chairman Stanley questioned Gary as to the American Iron & Steel Institute, of which Gary is also the head, and which it has been charged is attempting to effect a world wide monopoly of the steel business. Judge Gary after denying that this was the object of the organization, which he said is partly social and partly industrial in character, told the committee that he would furnish it with an outline of what the real objects were and what had occurred at the famous Gary dinner.

First, however, Judge Gary took occasion to correct, he said, newspaper reports which purported to show that he had admitted that the United States Steel Corporation dominates steel business.

"I did not mean to say," said Judge Gary "that it dominates the entire business. I intended to convey the idea that the United States Steel Corporation dominates its subsidiary companies. We perhaps control a little more than 50 per cent. of the present domestic steel business.

"Government to Control Prices."

Judge Gary then launched into a recital of the purposes of the American Iron & Steel Institute in order to disclose the minds of the committee, he said, of the impression that he was attempting to establish a monopoly of the steel business of the entire world. Before the witness began his testimony the committee agreed that when it adjourned tomorrow it would not meet again until next Wednesday in order that Judge Gary and other officials of the Steel Trust may return to their offices during Monday and Tuesday.

Judge Gary startled the committee when he declared that the Sherman law is now sufficient to meet modern business methods. He said that under the Sherman law it is impossible to prevent illegal combinations and that eventually the country must enforce publicity and government control of prices.

"Personally," said he, "I believe that the Sherman law does not and will not have the power to prevent illegal combinations. We must come to enforced publicity and governmental control."

"Do you mean governmental control of prices of large corporations?" asked Littleton of New York.

Sherman Law Not Sufficient.

"I do," replied the witness. "I know that this is a departure from the accepted doctrine of to-day, but I am frank to say that I do not believe that the Sherman law is sufficient for the needs of to-day and that eventually the government must step in and assume control directly of prices.

"As to my company, we would prefer to know what the prices are. We would like to have some authority to whom we might go, requesting that we be given the right to fix prices we should charge for our products."

"Do you mean the Sherman law," said Chairman Stanley, "notwithstanding the decisions of the courts declaring it an archaic law dealing with modern conditions?"

"That is my position," said the head of the Steel Trust. "As the situation is to-day the interpretation of the Sherman law means a return to the old warfare and destructive competition."

Previous to this testimony Judge Gary declared that the organization of the American Steel & Iron Institute was necessary to study prices and prevent many corporations from being driven out of business.

"You cannot dominate the Steel market," Judge Gary declared. "It never has been and never will be dominated. But it is possible that there shall be stability of prices. The users of steel themselves prefer stability."

Steel Men Got Together.

"At the time of the panic the Sherman law had not been interpreted, and the brokers begged us to form a combination to control prices. The panic meant that there would be ruinous competition. We decided the best thing to do was to have all the Steel men get together, talk over the situation, and in this way each manufacturer know what the other was doing, and there would be no ruinous competition.

"Do you think the national government should control prices and would have the right now to fix the prices at which the Steel Corporation shall sell?" asked Chairman Stanley.

"My opinion is," replied Judge Gary, "that so far as it relates to interstate commerce the federal government has that right."

Judge Gary told the committee that there is to be a meeting of Steel interests in Brussels July 5-8, and that a joint national institute will be talked over at that time, but it was not planned to effect a world wide monopoly.

PUBLIC OPINION BILL DEFEATED

The public opinion bill, which a majority of the State Senate refused to reject yesterday, was killed this afternoon by much the same tactics as were used in the memorable killing of the corrupt practices bill in 1908. The public opinion bill was one of organized labor's measures before this year's Legislature.

The bill was killed because three Republicans and two Democrats who voted for it yesterday absented themselves from the Senate chamber when the vote was taken to-day. They were:

Republicans—Charles S. Chase of Dighton, Joseph S. Gates of Westboro and Arthur L. Mason of Haverhill.

Democrats—James H. Doyle of Boston and James P. Timilty of Roxbury.

The bill was killed to-day by a vote of 9 to 11 against, with seven pairs.

The defeat of the measure was accomplished with as much piety as has ever been known on Beacon Hill. The Senate had twice refused to reject the measure, but the Ways and Means committee had recommended that it be killed, and it was ordered that the bill be a third reading. The opponents of the measure had enough votes in the Senate chamber to-day to defeat it on that question. But such a defeat could have been reconsidered next Monday, after the public had learned what happened and had got in touch with their representatives in the Senate.

So their arranged to kill the bill for the session. A motion was made by Green-wood of Gardner to reconsider the Senate's refusal to reject the bill yesterday. Malley of Springfield moved that action on this motion be postponed until Monday. Mack of North Adams also moved for postponement, but on the fourth floor while the roll was called.

Hibbard of Lowell, Turner of Fall River and Cook of Dighton, all of whom had voted for public opinion bill yesterday voted to-day to reconsider yesterday's action. Timilty of Roxbury, Doyle of Boston, Gates of Westboro and Nason of Dighton, who voted for the bill yesterday, did not answer the roll-call to-day on reconsideration. Doyle and Timilty were found out on the fourth floor within hearing distance of the bell which announced that a roll call was on.

FOSS FIGHTING TEACHERS' BILL

Governor Foss to-day sent to Attorney-General Swift a request for an opinion on the constitutionality of the action of the House of Representatives yesterday in reconsidering its failure to pass the Boston elementary teachers' salary bill over the veto.

Friends of the bill at the State House expressed themselves as failing to understand the motive of the Governor in asking for the opinion and were inclined to think that he is making the defeat of the measure a decidedly personal matter.

The point the Governor wishes the legal department of the State to clear up is the right of the House on Tuesday to reconsider a measure. In his letter to the Attorney-General he quotes from the State Constitution, Part Second, Chapter I, Article 2, as follows:

Quotes Constitution.

But if he (the Governor) have any objection to the passing of such bill or resolve he shall return the same * * * to the Senate or the House of Representatives * * * who shall proceed to reconsider the said bill or resolve.

The Governor also points out that the legislative rules provide that no measure shall be twice reconsidered. He wishes to know if the first vote taken in the House to override the teachers' bill veto is a reconsideration, or whether the constitution does say that it is. Governor Foss is desirous of knowing how it jibes with legislative rule 71, which says: "No question shall be twice reconsidered."

Other questions the Governor asks are: "If one branch of the Legislature fails to override a veto, can it reconsider its failure to do so?" "If so, is not the second reconsideration null and void under the legislative rule?"

It is pointed out by friends of the bill that Speaker Sanford of the House in 1874 ruled as follows:

Ignores Two Rulings.

"It is permissible to reconsider a vote refusing to pass a bill over the executive veto, notwithstanding the first vote is described in the constitution as a reconsideration of the bill.

Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, when Speaker in 1903, confirmed the Sanford ruling but the Governor is apparently not satisfied with these rulings. In his request to the Attorney-General he quotes liberally from "Notes on the Constitution" citing a number of court decisions.

BATHTUB SUSPECT FANATIC?

A new line of investigation was taken up to-day by the New York detectives in their investigation of the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Scheib, the bathtub victim, a Springfield girl, when they learned that the husband of the dead woman, who is locked up in the Tombs charged with the crime, was a student of a "New Thought" cult that it is believed filled his mind with delusions.

At 1 o'clock to-day Magistrate Corrigan gave Scheib a hearing on the charge of murder and the first degree that was to be laid against him.

Scheib, who was never known to his wife, so far as is known, except by the fictitious name of Hugh Allerton Sherman, denied positively to-day that he killed his wife when questioned by an AMERICAN reporter. Then one reporter asked the reporter this rather weird question.

"Are you a positive or a negative force? I mean a constructive or a destructive?"

The reporter admitted that he was sometimes a bit destructive when occasion demanded.

He Is Not "Destructive."

"It is not so with Scheib," said the prisoner. "I am an embodiment of a constructive force. God will not let a constructive force and a destructive force dwell in the same body. I could not, being what I am, do a destructive act."

Scheib's lawyer supplied the key to the conversation.

"My client," said he, "tells me that both he and his wife were intense students of psychology and the New Thought, and would spend hours in a great deal."

Scheib was asked why he called himself Hugh Allerton Sherman. He replied promptly:

"I can't tell you about that now, because I am compelled to use all my strength for the concentration and conservation of mind, energy and thought."

This made even the stalwart detective holding Scheib wince.

The question was repeated in another form.

"Oh, that would be too long a story to tell now," said Scheib, and besides I don't see what that's got to do with it. I can't tell myself anything I want to, if I don't do anybody else any harm!"

"I've already told the police all there is to it," he added, in a weary tone. "I've told them I was on my way to New York on February 2, that she left me and said she wouldn't come back.

"I stayed around thinking she might, till I found it too lonesome in the place with all her things around, and a friend and then, I decided to take a room somewhere else. While I was away I thought she might come back, but I made up my mind that if she did I had had enough. Then I moved over to Amsterdam avenue to do my work.

"But weren't you known as Hugh A. Sherman in Springfield?" asked the reporter.

Scheib frowned. "My name is Harry A. Scheib," he said, "and that's all I am going to say."

Father Talks of Tragedy.

Connor C. O'Grady, the father of the dead girl, who identified Scheib as the man who married his daughter under the name of Sherman, made arrangements in New York to-day for the disposal of her body. With tears in his eyes he talked in a broken tone of the "little girl."

"I was at the wedding of my poor little girl, like Mr. O'Grady," said Mrs. Lillie Donnelly in St. Francis Xavier's Church on Sixteenth street where she and her husband live. The fellow gave his name then as Sherman, but as Lillie and always known him and as I have always known him, and described him from Chicago.

"I can't understand how I got into Scheib or Sherman muck," added O'Grady, "but I was in the Klondike for a time, and one or two things happened that didn't make me like him. When I left Springfield I left wanted to marry him and I wouldn't put anything in the way of her happiness.

STRUCK BY TRAIN, BUT WILL RECOVER

Joseph Church thirty-eight years of age, who lives in a shanty owned by the New Haven railroad at South Braintree, was struck by an inbound express from Brockton to-day while crossing the tracks at Franklin street, Neponset. The pilot threw the man to one side and the engineer, thinking that Church had been killed, brought the train to a stop. He was unconscious. Word was sent ahead to the Massachusetts General Hospital and when the train reached the South Station the injured man was rushed to the hospital. One of his legs was broken, but he will recover.

B. & A. ROAD NOW 'SEPARATE'

The Boston & Albany Railroad, leased years ago by the New York Central and operated since as a part of its system, will be operated as a separate road on and after Monday next. That there would be a change in its management was announced several weeks ago when the existence of a joint traffic agreement with the New Haven road was made public.

President Brown of the New York Central to-day stated that the operating plan in regard to the Boston & Albany would be as it under James H. Hustis, appointed vice-president, with an office in Boston, while A. S. Hanson is to be general passenger agent, as for years past, and R. Vail Pumerson general freight agent. They will have their offices at the South Station.

Vice-President Hustis has named his executive staff as follows: H. M. Bissell, traffic manager; Woodward Hudson, general; J. L. Trudeu, general superintendent; F. H. Freeman, chief engineer; W. A. Culmeler, auditor; R. D. Smith, superintendent of motive power and rolling stock; F. A. Ryer, purchasing agent, all with offices in the South Station, and L. A. Anthony, superintendent of car service, with an office in Springfield.

TECH '91 CLASS OFF FOR OUTING AT CAPE

Fifty members of the class of '91, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, started from the Hotel Thorndike to-day for a three days' outing on Cape Cod to celebrate their twentieth anniversary. The trip is made in a dozen automobiles. The destination of the party is Wianno, better known as Osterville. The merrymakers will put up at the hotel and nearby cottages and between now and Monday will play tennis, golf and baseball tournaments. Motor boating and bathing will also be features of the celebration. The officers of the class who led the automobile party are Henry G. Bradlee of Stone & Webster, president, and Howard C. Forbes, secretary.

MINISTER SOLD STOCK FOR PLASS

The Rev. Norman Plass, president; Charles H. Brock, manager, and John H. Traphagen, treasurer of the Redeemable Investment Company, jointly charged with using the mails to defraud, heard several women tell Judge Dodge and a jury in the United States District Court to-day how they were induced to buy shares in the company. The profits of the promoters are said to have run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Mrs. Della L. Bowen, wife of James Bowen, a carriage painter of Adams, Mass., said that in January, 1910, she paid $200 for ten shares of class B stock in the Redeemable Company. She was introduced to the plan by the Rev. J. Spencer Kent, formerly pastor of the Congregational Church in Adams, who has testified that he became an agent of the company on the promise that he was to have 10 per cent in commissions and a drawing account of $100 a month.

Could Not Redeem Stock.

In the following October, Mrs. Bowen said, she had tried to have the stock redeemed, but met with no success. Under cross-examination by Samuel Elder, attorney for the defendants, she admitted that the stock was finally taken over by Mr. Voorhees, but that instead of money she received other stock for it.

Miss Ella C. Mason of Pittsfield, formerly a member of Mr. Voorhees's church in Adams, said she had learned of the company through Mrs. Bowen and bought ten shares of Redeemable stock from Mr. Voorhees. This was in February, 1910. She tried to redeem it later on, she said, but could not.

After the raid on the offices of the company, Miss Mason testified, she secured aid in having her stock exchanged for 100 shares in the Santo Domingo Mining Company, a subsidiary concern of the Redeemable Investment Company. She also admitted that she received a check for $5 in interest on the money she had put into the original shares. Later, she said, she exchanged the Santo Domingo stock, through Mr. Voorhees, for shares in the Boston Associated Trust Company.

Doctor a Witness.

Dr. Stephen F. Chase of Millville testified that January 1, 1910, he bought ten shares in the Redeemable enterprise. He said that he had received circulars issued by the company, but never through the mails.

When he tried to have his stock redeemed, Mr. Chase said, he was told the president of the company was away and that nothing could be done until his return.

Mr. Elder brought out by his questions that Dr. Chase had finally turned his stock back and had received interest on his money after the firm had been raided.

Up to Midnight London Time

Queen Mary's Crown Is Now on Exhibition.

LONDON—Queen Mary's crown, with the blazing Koh-i-noor and two sections of the Cullinan diamond, designed by Garrard & Co., the crown jewelers, was exposed to view to-day. Hundreds inspected it and the King's crown, which has been altered to fit the head of the present monarch. The Queen's crown weighs only nineteen ounces. The Maryx throughout the empire contributed $60,000 for the Queen's coronation gift. The donors range from beggar maids to duchesses and the donations from halfpennies to pounds.

Carnegie Plea for Peace.

LONDON—The National Liberal Club gave a dinner to Andrew Carnegie in recognition of his peace crusade. Earl Carrington presided. Mr. Carnegie's speech was cheered. "When President Taft made up his mind to do things he was as stubborn as a mule," said Carnegie. "Now, owing to his efforts, victory is within our grasp. Our public spend 70 per cent. of its cash on the national revenue on pensions for war and its preparations. You can go on preparing, and the more you prepare the more you breed the particular danger. But when our race banishes war, we sound its deathknell. The glorious task is ours to send the world."

Sir Henry King Unseated.

LONDON—The outcry against the election inquiries made by the judges, which has been based hitherto on the alleged Unionist bias of the judges—an allegation emphasized by Winston Churchill's insinuations in the House of Commons two days ago—received a check when the judges unseated Sir Henry Seymour King, who for twenty-five years has been the Unionist representative from Hull, on the ground that illegal acts had been committed by his agents.

Patti's Voice Young Again.

LONDON—Mme. Patti sang at a concert for the benefit of her old pianist, William Ganz, and the verdict of musical London is that the famous diva's voice is growing young again. After Mme. Patti sang Mme. Tetrazzini, amid tremendous applause, rushed on the stage and embraced her, presenting a beautiful bouquet. The singer who had so often enthralled New York, responded to encores with "Home, Sweet Home."

Woman Sues Court Newsman.

LONDON—Henry Charles North, the London journalist, who rose to his title and emoluments of the Court Newsman, and who issues the Court Circular, appeared as the defendant in a breach of promise suit brought by a governess. She asserts that North represented himself as an eligible bachelor, and that, too late, she discovered he was a married man with a family.

CONTEST END 13 DAYS AWAY

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

Thirteen—lucky or not—is the number of days left in the AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest.

This tremendous competition comes to a close on Thursday, June 15, which is thirteen days away.

This remaining time will be lucky for some, unlucky for others. It will be a hoodoo period for those who are asleep at the switch from now on.

It will be a time of good luck for those who achieve reward by earnest effort. As a matter of fact, there is no real luck about it. The prizes will go to the workers, not to the sluggards.

Some candidates who rank high now are congratulating themselves that they have a fine prize all "bottled up" for themselves, as the expression goes.

But suppose some other hustling candidate comes along and uncorks the bottle? In other words suppose some other candidate, by extra work at the finish, beats the apparent winners by a few hundred votes, or a few dozen votes?

You can't tell till the finish. The only thing you can be sure of is that votes count and that the ones who get the most votes will get the prizes.

The answer to all this, then, is, work. Work. WORK! Don't slack up now. Hold to a fast pace. Scour your vote-getting territory. Round up every vote and subscription that has so far escaped.

Bear in mind, meanwhile, that the next list of candidates' standing, with vote totals, will be printed on Sunday, June 11. This will be the last list before the finish.

ADAMS SQUARE

RAPID TRANSIT LIFT FAILURE

Superintendent Fish of the Public Buildings Department expects an order to-day to run the elevators at City Hall as formerly, namely, from the ground floor to the top.

During the past week Superintendent Fish changed the order of things by limiting the runs of the east elevator to the third floor and the run of the west elevator from the basement express to the third floor and then to the top floor.

There has been nothing but confusion since the "rapid transit" rule went into effect. If one takes the west elevator and is intending to visit the second floor, he must get out at the third and walk down a flight. If he is going to the fourth or above and takes the east elevator, he must get out at the third and walk over to the other elevator, unless he prefers to walk up.

The City Council on Wednesday passed an order calling on Mayor Fitzgerald to direct Superintendent Fish to run the elevators as of old.

DUCHESS TO PASS SEASON AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT, R. I., June 2—The Duchess of Marlborough will spend the greater part of the Summer at Newport with her parents, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Marble House is being prepared for her home-coming. It is understood that the Duchess is well pleased with the attitude of Queen Mary toward her and other divorcees.

LYNN FLYER HIT BY GALE

HARVARD AVIATION FIELD, June 2.—Harry N. Atwood of Lynn, had a narrow escape from being blown out to sea today when his biplane was carried nearly two miles from its course by the forty-mile wind that swept Dorchester Bay and the harbor.

Manipulating the ailerons and elevating planes in a frantic effort to climb out of the danger zone, the aviator managed to work into a position where the propeller of his machine gripped the air with enough drawing power to counteract the wind.

BABY IS POISONED BY COUGH SYRUP

BUTLER, Pa., June 2.—Grace Moser, aged three, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Moser of East Butler, died today great agony to-day as the result of drinking cough syrup containing heroin. Her brothers, Frank, aged five, and Smith, aged six, are in a critical condition, they, too, having drunk of the cough syrup. Physicians say that five children drank several five times the regulation dose.

HELD AS THIEF, PLEADS JEKYLL

SPRINGFIELD, June 2.—Paul H. Roland, twenty-five years old, who escaped from this city on March 22 and is alleged to have been short $2,000 in his accounts at the Green Flint Exchange, believes he has a dual personality, he told the police in Charleston, S. C., where he was arrested for Chief Quilty of this city that it is the only way he can account for the fact that he had left a good position here to go South. He says he remembers nothing from the time he left Springfield until he found himself in Charleston two weeks ago. He was arrested while at work as a sign painter.

Roland came to this city a stranger six months ago, and his personality, or lack otherwise, so won him friends that he was taken into the Green Flint Exchange by Joseph Spero, the proprietor. Roland was made manager and later was taken into partnership. Spero told the police that he went to his office on March 22 and found Roland gone without leaving any word, and on investigation found that he had shorted a shortage of $2,000.

Roland will be brought back here.

HELD FOR BREAK IN LYNN HOUSE

Charged with breaking and entering the residence of Benjamin O. Johnson at No. 50 Whittier street, Lynn, and with assault with intent to kill Fred Schelsay of No. 56 Whittier street, Frank Menevitch, alias Frank Millett, was to-day arraigned in the Lynn District court before Judge Sweetser. He was held in $5,000 bonds for the Grand Jury. The police allege that Menevitch forced an entrance into the Johnson home yesterday afternoon. Screams from Mrs. Johnson that there was burglar in the house brought Schelsay to the Johnson home. The burglar was in the dining room going through the silverware when Schelsay entered. Schelsay and the burglar struggled and the latter drew a stiletto. Schelsay was struck several blows in the neck, face and shoulders. It was nearly by fatal 18 stitches to close the wounds. The burglar was chased for several hundred yards by the police and a number of citizens. He was caught after a chase a mile in the High Rock district.

WATER POISON DANGER GONE

Secretary W. N. Dubois of the Metropolitan Water Commission says nobody need be afraid to drink water in Boston because fish are dying by the hundreds in a stream which empties into the Quincy poxet River near Jefferson. Most the water from these streams feeds the metropolitan basin at Oakdale and is a part of Boston's water supply.

Otto Durant, deputy fish and game warden, found dead fish all the way up stream from Quincypoxet to the Eagle Lake Mill and picked up dead trout weighing a pound apiece, besides pickerel, perch, pout, sucker and another variety kind of fish living in the waters.

Secretary Davenport said:

"I have instructed the engineer in that section to investigate. The Quincypoxet is one of the sources of the Boston water supply, but its water does not reach Chestnut Hill reservoir for about nine months which is ample time to purify itself. In every body of water there are fish, but they never caused so many deaths. The fish are dying because the Quincypoxet River or tributaries. I shall have the streams tested and take steps to prevent any danger. The fish are poisoned. The cause will be removed at once."

'FIGHTING NINTH' PARADE PLANS

The route of the parade of the survivors of the "Fighting Ninth" Massachusetts Regiment, which fought so gallantly in the Civil War, has been decided. The parade occurs Sunday, June 11. The committees having in charge the celebration of the mustering of the regiment announce the following route:

East Armory, East Newton street, to Harrison avenue, to Massachusetts avenue, passing the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, where all the children will be assembled on the steps and in front of the home; Massachusetts avenue to Columbus avenue, to Park square, turning from there into Boylston street, thence to Arlington street. A halt will be made on Arlington street, while the veterans of the Ninth, with a detail from the active regiment bearing the colors, will move into the Public Garden, and a wreath will be placed on the statue of the late Colonel Thomas Cass, the colonel who organized and commanded the war regiment; then the column will move to the south side of Commonwealth avenue, to Clarendon street, to Copley square, to Huntington avenue, to West Newton street, to East Newton street to the East Armory.

The regiment will be under command of Colonel John J. Sullivan and Lieutenant-Colonel H. Dunn. James M. Phelan is chairman of the citizens' committee.

The whole arrangements for the event promise many features, and the day will be one long to be remembered by all those interested in the Ninth Regiment.

"Fighting Ninth" is a name given the regiment of Massachusetts by General Phil Porter, under whom it fought. In the closing days of its three years' service the regiment made steadfast the title by its plunge into the jaws of death at the Wilderness when 156 men were killed or wounded in one fearful dash. This and simply supplemented the charge at Mill Malvern Hill, where the men were mowed down—250 in the first and half of the balance of the regiment in the next.

ARTISTS BEQUEATHED $100,000 BY WOMAN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 2.—In the will of the eccentric Mrs. Rosina A. Brown, disposing of an estate of $180,000, $90,000 is left to Howard J. Potter and $10,000 to Fred L. Biddons, both of them young artists whom Mrs. Brown educated. Everything was left to her friends with the provision that if any of her relatives offer objections they are to be given $5 and told to go about their business.

PASS RECIPROCITY BILL AT ONCE, SAYS MAYOR FITZGERALD

By Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

I hope this reciprocity bill will be passed without further delay. For Congress to flitter away time in the matter is a plain attempt to defeat the will of the people. Members of Congress ought to see the futility of delaying action in the matter. Failure to act speedily will be looked upon by the people as unwillingness to grant the wish of the great majority of the people besides working an injury to American industries. I believe and expect that the bill will be passed very soon.

SUFFRAGE BAN IRKS RADCLIFFE

If Harvard men can have a league for Women's Suffrage, why are Radcliffe girls forbidden to have a suffrage club. That question is agitating suffragettes following the disbanding by the faculty of the year old Radcliffe Suffrage League.

"In view of the attitude of the Harvard faculty towards the Harvard League, the abolition of a league formed for practically the same purpose at Radcliffe seems very, very unreasonable and strangely inconsistent," said Alice Stone Blackwell.

"The Harvard League is doubtless an outgrowth of the equal suffrage sentiment that is sweeping through the student bodies everywhere. There is a thriving organization at Wellesley College, a big one at Bryn Mawr, another at the University of Wisconsin, and in fact there are as many as forty chapters in the different women's colleges.

"The effect on Radcliffe has resulted in the usual story of the forbidden fruit. I hope that in time a more liberal policy will prevail in Radcliffe."

June Adkins of the Radcliffe Civic Club, the organization to which the girls were compelled to transform their suffrage League, and which lacks all the essentials of a suffrage body, said:

"Personally, I think the authorities are carrying it too far. The Radcliffe League was formed in 1909 and it continued all last year before they settled upon some not very definite reasons for compelling us to disband. As a general principle, they do not want the college publicly represented by a suffrage association. They are always more sedate with the girls."

NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

CARUSO'S LOVE LETTERS READ

NEW YORK, June 2.—The history of Enrico Caruso's love-making to Pauline Carrill, the vaudeville actress who girl, is revealed in the letters, just made public in Italy, which passed between the famous tenor and the girl who is suing him for $50,000 for breach of promise to marry.

Cable dispatches from Milan tell the text of these billet doux which at first were extremely fervid, yet grew cold in time. Then the missives from Caruso suddenly ceased. The girl says she was introduced by the great singer as his fiancee.

Letters Declare Her Love.

His letters were getting more and more affectionate when Caruso went to Berlin. Pauline, accompanied by her father, went to visit him there. She says she was introduced to Caruso's fellow artists there as his fiancee, and that he gave a grand banquet before she left to return home to Milan.

Before the alleged betrothal Pauline wrote:

"Dearest Signor Caruso—How anxiously I am looking for you to-day, as it is my day off. How happy am I, with all your heart and how I promise to love you, for all I have in the world to give you is my honor and faith.

A little later, when the friendship had flowered further, Pauline wrote:

"Dearest—I dreamed you were by me. Oh, if it only had been so."

On receiving a photograph of Caruso in costume, Pauline penned this:

"My word. How handsome you look Oh, Enrico, if you had only been with me. And to think of me in my simple frock while you were dressed like that on the stage."

Caruso was peevish over her spelling, and hinted that he had fears that she never would be well educated to go into society. She replied:

"I have noticed for some time that you were very cross with me."

Sent Her His Caricature.

Then came the first serious sign of a rupture. In the letter answering Caruso wrote:

"I send you a little caricature of myself and you. Show it to your family to make fun of."

This wounded Pauline's feelings, and she responded that she had remarked how curt his letters had become. His reply was:

"That is quite enough. For some time past I have seriously thought of bringing our relations to a close."

Then he goes on to give reasons why they cannot marry.

Several succeeding letters waver between fits of good and bad humor. There was no open breach, but after the Berlin visit his letters dropped off and he finally cut the Gordian knot in this fashion:

"My Bohemian life is not fitted to bring us together. I have now had time to reflect, and I want to part good friends. I shall always retain a pleasant impression of you and am disposed to make good any loss you have suffered by the loss of employment. There are other serious reasons for our not marrying. We should both be unhappy; so let us each regain our liberty."

Pauline's answer was:

"I Cannot Leave You."

"Listen, Enrico. I speak to you with an open heart. I know why you have changed. I shall never believe it was on account of your profession. You are a man. You knew well what trouble you were preparing for a poor creature when you asked me to be your wife. Let us talk aloveboard about the change of feeling. You say you cannot marry me for certain reasons which would make us both unhappy. But I know this, Enrico, my own Enrico. Even though it is like a death blow not to be near you, I submit to your wish, being unable to do otherwise. But I cannot submit to relations with you, for this would be more than I could bear, Enrico, I cannot. Think me in my opinion, you will always be mine.

"Write soon, dearest, and let me hear when you can come, for I feel you still care for me, and we can be happy even without marriage."

To this Caruso made no reply. Other letters from Pauline followed in the same vein. In one she says:

"Why trouble about marriage? Where there is affection there is happiness. You will say perhaps that I would be lost to the world. Well, let it be so."

At this point Caruso tried to get back his letters. She wrote:

"I want you; only you. I shall never give up your letters."

A Money Consideration.

So the correspondence kept on until she mentioned a money consideration and sought to settle her claim directly with him. This was in one letter of that period.

"Signor Caruso—I will not suffer the past. You know all my letters have gone into the waste paper basket. But let me recall my visit to Paris and your promises there in my mother's presence, when you told me in Paris to trust your word. I was sure you would be generous, but every man of honor keeps his word. I trusted you and waited for your lawyer. A battle and I remained a prisoner between you and your lawyer.

"After long and weary negotiations I replied that perhaps the sum of 20,000 lire was excessive. Costa fluibed to offering 50,000 lire ($10,000), which he said might be brought up to 60,000 ($12,000). As you never went back on your word and recognized that you had done me wrong, I thought he was speaking seriously, but soon found out it was not. At last I lost patience, and though I knew you could come to Milan and I could see you you would not do so, preferring to act with perfect discretion.

"Let us arrange the matter without the intervention of lawyers. If we can not, I know what remains for me to do. Do not think this is a threat, Enrico, but as our love subsided like a dream, so you upset my quiet life of work and gave me visions of life, light and joy, only to dash me back into darkness. I say it is only my right to submit my claims on behalf with by the law and to let the newspapers know what I have suffered if you refuse to grant me restitution."

Caruso maintains that he is under no obligations to the girl and will not be forced to give her any money.

PHONE GIRLS IN COHASSET WED

Two operators from the Cohasset Telephone Exchange start on honeymoon today. Miss Dora C. Bates, for several years chief operator at the exchange, is the bride of William J. McLaughlin of Newton, of the construction department of the company.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. F. Donohoe at the parochial residence of St. Anthony's parish.

Soon after the departure of the first wedding party from the parochial residence, Miss Genevieve McMahan, who was assistant chief operator under Miss Bates, and Thomas J. Hill of Setauket were married by Father Donohoe.

NEW COMBINE OF FRUIT FIRMS

BALTIMORE, Md., June 2.—Announcement is expected shortly of the consolidation of the Atlantic Fruit Company, the Di Giorgio Fruit Company and several other fruit and steamship interests in the United States, Cuba and Central America. The new combination which has practically been perfected will have a stock and bond capitalization of between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 and will be financed by a New York bank. Mr. Di Giorgio will be president of the new concern which, next to the United Fruit Company, will be the largest enterprise of its kind in the United States.

CUT TREES THAT SHADE WIFE NO. 2

CRANSTON, R. I., June 2.—Mrs. Melissa Budlong, despite protests from the police and city officials, has cut down the six big maple trees that stood between her home and that of her former husband, Frank L. Budlong. City Solicitor Palmer was busy to-day trying to ascertain whether or not two of the trees were on city property.

Recently Mr. Budlong, who is a market gardener supplying Boston produce houses, married again. He is sixty-seven years old and his bride is about thirty years his junior.

TRINITY CHURCH DEFICIT SHOWN

NEW YORK, June 2.—The annual report of Trinity Church Corporation just issued shows that the parish expended $341,116 last year for the maintenance of its ten churches and eleven schools. City taxes and water rates reached a total of $137,000, which is an increase of about 9 per cent. over the figures for last year. Trinity's receipts for the year were $853,719, the largest item being $751,269 for rents of real estate. The total expenditures, exclusive of the outlay on account of new buildings, were slightly in excess of $1,000,000, so that the report shows a deficit for the year.

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle

DeMiracle

The wonderful preparation acknowledged the world over as the only satisfactory and reliable Hair Remover ever offered the public.

Don't experiment with worthless, poisonous substitutes. Remember that the harm done by them is not noticeable with the first few applications, but the greater danger lies in the frequent or continued use of such depilatories. Aside from being dangerous, the longer you use them the stronger the hair will grow after each removal, and the more difficult it will be to remove it.

The best proof that De Miracle is the standard depilatory of the world is that it has stood the test of time. It was the greatest selling depilatory ten years ago and still holds this enviable reputation. It is the only method which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals, prominent magazines and newspapers.

Booklet free in plain sealed envelope, and if you cannot get De Miracle from your dealer, it will be mailed in plain wrapper on receipt of price. Address De Miracle Chemical Company, Park Avenue and 129th Street, New York.

All honest dealers recommend De Miracle, because they know it to be the most meritorious depilatory in the world. Others may try to sell you their own preparation, or some other worthless substitute under another label, merely for a few cents more profit.

Remember, substitutes and imitations are only the discarded experiments of the original inventors, therefore, for your own protection, we would strongly advise that when you are offered a "just as good," that you refuse it, and go to the store named below, and you will be given De Miracle without argument.

"Sunkist" Oranges

The Finest Fruit Grown

This Genuine Rogers Orange Spoon FREE.

Save 12 "Sunkist" Oranges (or Lemon) wrappers and send them to us, with 25c per dozen, extra, and we will present you with a genuine Rogers Orange Spoon, of beautiful design and highest quality, exactly as shown. Dealers today. Send 12 "Sunkist" wrappers and 12c for each additional spoon.

In remitting, please send in money when the amount is less than 50c or amounts above 50c we prefer money order, express or bank draft. We will be glad to send you our complete list of valuable premiums. We also have a handsome "Red Ball" wrapper for premiums.

The orange is the most luscious and healthful fruit. California excels in quality of oranges. The best of the California oranges are now packed in individual wrappers labeled "Sunkist." Five thousand orange farmers in California do their own packing, shipping and selling. They grade and select their crop into "firsts," "seconds," etc. The firsts are tangy, tree-ripened, handpicked, juicy, thirdless, thin-skinned oranges—every individual orange a perfect specimen of the finest variety of oranges. They are not only more healthful and more palatable than other oranges, but they are actually cheaper, for they are nearly all meat and nourishment. Your dealer sells "Sunkist" Oranges. Ask for them. You will know them by the tissue paper wrapper in which each "Sunkist" Orange is packed. On the wrapper note the label, "Sunkist." Keep all the wrappers. They are worth money to you.

Best California Lemons Come in "Sunkist" Wrappers

You can judge lemons by the "clothes" they wear. If they wear "Sunkist" wrappers they are juicy and good, for they are not thick-skinned or pithy. They are just as fine as "Sunkist" Oranges, and their wrappers are equally valuable.

WOMAN DOCTOR DIES A MARTYR

Dr. Emma W. Mooers, curator of the neuro-pathological department at the Harvard Medical School, is dead, a martyr in the cause of humanity. She became infected with streptococci, the germs of tonsilitis while performing a post-mortem on the brain of a man who died of tonsilitis. It was in her seat to study and stay, if possible, by the aid of medical science, the spread of the epidemic of tonsilitis in Boston that she contracted the most virulent form of the disease and died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Dr. Elmer E. Southard, a professor in the same department in the medical school, contracted the disease while working with Mrs. Mooers in the operation, and has been at the Massachusetts General Hospital but is now declared out of danger.

Assisted in Post-Mortem.

The post-mortem was held at the neuro-pathological department laboratory at Harvard Medical School on May 18. It was performed by Dr. Southard, Dr. Mooers assisting.

The disease had caused a general infection of the body of the dead man, but there was nothing to show by the post-mortem that the brain had become infected.

That night, however, Dr. Mooers became seriously ill and the next day was removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital. She had become infected by means of a scratch on the middle finger of the right hand, which was so slight that she declared at the hospital that she was not aware of any abrasion.

As is the case in all such infections, septicaemia set in; all the knowledge of medical science could not stop the onward rush of the disease as it spread throughout the arm and finally into the body.

Unable to Save Her.

On Monday pneumonia developed, as it usually does in such cases, and this was the immediate cause of her death.

A few days after Dr. Mooers was taken ill Dr. Southard was stricken. He had a slight abrasion on the right thumb of which he was unconscious; it proved a ply for the germ and infection resulted.

He was also taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, but his case was not so serious as that of Dr. Mooers. After a few days he was able to return to his home at No. 37 Trowbridge street, Cambridge. Sunday, however, symptoms of the disease appeared again and he was obliged to return to the hospital for further treatment. It was said to-day that there was no cause for alarm in his case; that he is practically cured, but will remain at the hospital for several days until the hand is perfectly well.

Devoted Life to Science.

Dr. Emma W. Mooers was well known in medical circles throughout the world, having devoted her life to the science of medicine. She was only fifty-two years old and was born in Greendale, Wis. She was a graduate of Ann Arbor Medical School, University of Michigan, and received a degree at Munich.

For a number of years she was engaged in study and research abroad, for a greater part of the time in Germany and Paris.

She was recognized as an authority on nerve pathology and was a specialist in Wasserman technique. She was engaged for a time in special and research work at the McLellan Hospital Laboratory, Waverley.

She leaves three sisters, Miss Florence Mooers of Michigan, Mrs. Horace M. Keegan of Milwaukee, Wis., and Mrs. H. H. Reed of California.

The present epidemic of tonsilitis, to which may be directly attributed the death of Dr. Mooers, has proven unusually fatal to elderly persons. Out of the eighteen deaths that have already resulted from the epidemic in Greater Boston, ten of the victims of the disease were over sixty.

It is believed for a time that the excessive spread of tonsilitis might be due to impure milk, but the State Board of Health and the Boston and Brookline boards, which have made a thorough investigation, declare that the epidemic cannot be attributed to milk. They are at a loss to know the exact cause, but believe it may be due to dry and dusty atmospheric conditions.

HARVARD MEN OFF ON FROLIC

Three hundred whooping Harvard seniors swept down upon the good ship King Philip as she lay at Commercial Wharf to-day ready to take them on their long awaited picnic to Peddock's Island.

Captain Ned Dixon is a patient man, but when the boys invaded the pilot house and the captain's quarters and every other nook and cranny, blew the whistle and jangled the signal bells, yelled at the top of their lusty young lungs, jested none too gently with the huskies of the crew, sent out raucous blasts from the tin horns each and every man of them carried and finally said a few well chosen words quite derogatory to Yale, Captain Dixon became peevish.

"Avast there, ye jubilees," quoth Captain Ned (or words to that effect) "not a screw turns until we have order and propriety." It required some repetition and a liberal dose of epithets to impress this thought on the Harvard men. But there was comparative quiet as the steamer started.

She had not gone a yard from the dock, however, when the Stars and Stripes came fluttering down from the mainmast peak and a pair of vivid crimson bathing trunks broke out to the breeze. Then a mighty yell went up as one agile senior swarmed up the rigging and from the topmast yard began to give orders in the nautical terms he had mastered by frequent voyages in a wagoning taxicab.

The First Corps of Cadets Band, which had been chartered for the occasion, started to discourse a little soothing music, but the strains were drowned in the blare of horns and as the vessel moved out into the harbor pandemonium broke loose again.

At each senior's lapel was pinned a crimson badge with the legend, "Very Moist," and below it hung a miniature tin dipper.

It was said that at Peddock's Island baseball, track games and water sports would occupy the festive seniors before and after the great fish dinner that was ready for them, but there were those who put more faith in the significance of the tin dipper.

The picnic was scheduled to disperse at evening on the return of the King Philip to her pier. Festivities began at 5 o'clock in the morning when huge notes announced the class to assemble for a triumphant parade around the yard and a procession through Memorial Hall before the special cars started for Boston.

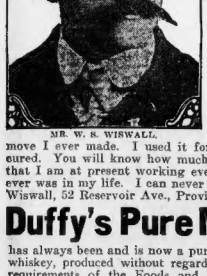
Completely Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea



MR. W. S. WISWALL.

An acute sufferer since 1894, Mr. Wiswall had lost faith in everything until he tried this great medical whiskey.

It worked a complete cure, and now he "can never say enough in praise of it."

In his letter he says: "It is with pleasure that I write stating what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey did for me. In 1894 I had a sickness which left me with chronic diarrhoea in the worst form. For years I spent a great many dollars fruitlessly in my endeavors to find relief and I was completely discouraged. One day, after suffering for about 15 years, I read that Duffy's would cure chronic diarrhoea, and I made up my mind to give it a trial. It was the best move I ever made. I used it for one year and I was completely cured. You will know how much good it has done me when I tell that I am at present working every day and am just as well as I ever was in my life. I can never say enough in its praise." W. S. Wiswall, 52 Reservoir Ave., Providence, R. I.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has always been and is now a pure, wholesome, healthful medicinal whiskey, produced without regard to expense in compliance with the requirements of the Foods and Drugs Act, the doctors' "Materia Medica" and the "Pharmacopoeia," the two recognized authorities of drugs and medicines in the United States. Great care is used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a liquid food, tonic and stimulant, requiring no digestion. its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. Its gentle and invigorating properties influence for good every important organ in the body. It makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American war.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00 a large bottle. Doctor's advice and an illustrated medical booklet sent free on request. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

MONEY IN RAT HOLES.

You had as well put your money in a rat hole as to spend it for catch-penny devices, the so-called harmless exterminators. The thing that won't kill anything else won't likely kill rats and mice; the thing that would dry up, embalm or mummify rats and mice, they would eat and it would not dry them up if they did), so you would still have your rats and mice and the catch-penny schemers would have your money. Beware of the ready-for-use things you don't have to mix. There is a reason! No matter what the "just-as-good" substitutor may say, ask for, and see you get, "Rough on Rats," recognized by the people of all nations as the Unbeatable Exterminator. 15c., 25c., 75c. Boxes.

THE SECRET.

Rough on Rats is powder; the unbeatable exterminator. Rats like rats and mice, but never balk at the bait; the secret is, you don't do the mixing. Buy your flour paste and grease separately at 6c a pound. Take a hint, do your own mixing, pay for poison only, when you get results. Equally effective for mice, roaches, ants, flies, bedbugs, prairie dogs and other "varmints" don't die in the house. Sold by druggists everywhere. 15c., 25c., 75c. Boxes.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

TOO MANY CATS; SEEKS DIVORCE

Marital troubles of Captain and Mrs. Edgar R. Taylor of Medford, which the public exchequer were started when his wife began keeping 15 Angora cats in the kitchen and were further aggravated when Mrs. Taylor struck him and called him a fool, were related to-day to Judge Fox, presiding over the divorce court at Lowell. Mrs. Taylor is contesting the case.

Taylor, formerly captain of an ocean steamer, now a cement contractor doing business in Boston, testified he was much disturbed by Mrs. Taylor's cats. He declared that on Christmas night, 1898, his wife struck him with a silver pitcher that he intended to present his sister, that his wife frequently struck him and called him a fool.

On cross-examination, Captain Taylor admitted that when the Angora cats were first kept at their home he assisted in exhibiting them at fairs, where they were awarded prizes. He said that later the cats became objectionable and a house was built for them in the yard.

Captain Taylor said he became afraid of what his wife might do to him. He admitted he struck his wife in the face once.

WON'T LIBERATE STATE LEPERS

Dr. Joshua P. Lewis of the State Board of Charity decided yesterday the report that any of the lepers now at Penikese Island will be discharged. He stated, however, that a Southern specialist has been so successful in experimental work that a cure for leprosy is assured soon.

"Some time ago we did consider sending to her home one of the patients at Penikese," said Dr. Lewis, "but, after consultation with experts, we decided to keep the woman. It was also that we did, for since that time the disease has been very progressive.

"I would not want to turn one afflicted with leprosy loose until after ten years to be sure. In ten years both it is a conservative estimate that at least 100 lepers are going about, unleashed."

MARRIAGE MARK FOR MAY BROKEN

All May records for marriage licenses in Boston were broken last month, according to the official figures just made up by Registrar Meehenen. The total number granted was 734, against 655 in May, 1910, 590 in the same month of 1909, 578 in May, 1908, and 718 in May, 1907.

The Mayor's office was authority last evening for the statement that last month's figures were a vindication of the Mayor's well-known public advocacy of marriage as a means of making Boston bigger and better. It is recorded in the registry department that no less than seven Aldermen obtained licenses for marriages in May, 1911, and this is taken by the experts of the Mayor's office as meaning that the Mayor's vocation has had something to do with boosting the matrimonial market heretofore.

WOMAN SUICIDE WITH A RAZOR

PROVIDENCE, June 2.—During a period of mental depression Miss Amy F. Burt, sister of President William C. Burt of the Rhode Island Tool Company, committed suicide by cutting her throat in a secluded spot on the grounds of Butler Hospital. She used a razor which she had taken from her brother's room at the home occupied by herself and him at No. 16 Stimson avenue. Her suicide comes as a terrible shock to Providence society, where Miss Burt has been prominent since her girlhood days. She was thirty-seven years old.

Miss Burt left the house at 9 a. m. to make a deposit at the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company. She made the deposit, but failed to return home for luncheon. When the dinner hour arrived and she was still absent her brother, Dr. Edward S. Allen, the family physician, and the police were notified.

The police found she had been seen on a Butler avenue trolley. This clew led to a search of the Butler Hospital grounds, where the body was found by Colonel Irving L. Hunt.

Medical Examiner Griffin pronounced the case suicide.

Miss Burt had been in ill-health for several months. Her relatives say that on the day she left the house she seemed more cheerful than for weeks.

4,000 17-YEAR LOCUSTS CAGED

NEW YORK, June 2.—Four thousand seventeen-year locusts are captives in the reptile house of the New York Zoological Gardens as a result of their first appearance in New York. They arrived in the Bronx in a thick cloud and had no sooner alighted than Curator Ditmars led an attack on them. The insects will be placed on exhibition and later mounted and sold as souvenirs.

"There is no way of preventing the advent of this pest," said Mr. Ditmars. "They come out of the ground after seventeen years of hibernation, fly around for three weeks and then die. During their three weeks' existence in the air they eat nothing. The injury to vegetation is caused by the laying of their eggs in the bark of trees, where after three weeks of incubation they appear as larva and tumble to the ground, where they hide for the next seventeen years.

"The eggs are laid four feet from the ends of the branches, and after the egg and die. Accordingly farmers should not pay any pruning until after the next year. By July 15 the insects will be through with their work for this year."

6,000 SIGN FOR SUNDAY GAMES

Eugene Sullivan of Austin avenue, East Boston, is in Washington to call upon Senator Crane and urge upon him that Sunday baseball be continued at Fort Banks, Winthrop, and that civilians be permitted to contest with the soldiers on Sunday. With him Mr. Sullivan carries petitions containing, he says, 6,000 signatures. The signers are mostly non-residents of Winthrop, about 90 per cent of them come from South Boston, East Boston and other sections of Greater Boston.

HUNT WOMAN AS KIDNAPER

Failing to get any trace of Mrs. Susan A. Boyle of Taunton or the two children she is charged with kidnaping, Deputy Sheriff Charles Cory of that city has offered $100 reward for information that will lead to the woman's arrest. He now believes the woman fled to Scotland, taking the two children with her.

According to the story told by the Taunton official the children were living in the family of the maternal grandmother ever since the mother died and a few weeks ago the members of the children's father's family had the case carried to the Probate court, when Judge Elliot gave the custody of the children to Edgar B. Smith, the paternal grandfather. It appears that Mrs. Smith had secured affidavits from her husband, George Y. Smith, and the custody of the children.

After the ruling of the court Mrs. Boyle, who was present at the trial, asked permission to take the children home to dress them and did this upon before turning them over to the legal custodian.

Mrs. Boyle failed to reappear with the children and Edgar B. Smith appealed to the local court and had a warrant sworn out for Mrs. Boyle's arrest, charging her with kidnaping her two grandchildren, May and Edgar John Smith.

ALFANO JESTED ON FATAL EVE

VITERBO, Italy, June 2.—Rose Enrico Alfano, head of the Neapolitan Camorra, sat and bundled jests with his guests at a dinner party at the Mimi a Mare Inn on the evening of June 3, 1906, while waiting for word to be brought to him that the death sentence of his friend hung against Giovanni Cuocolo, a betrayer, had been carried out, was told upon the witness stand to-day amidst a breathless silence. The story was told by a young coachman named Jacovitti, who was in the dining room at the time and who was subsequently arrested as a Camorrist, but was later released.

The Mimi a Mare Inn stands overlooking the Bay of Naples at Torre del Greco, not far from the spot where Cuocolo was ambushed and killed to death by six men.

Among Alfano's guests upon the evening in question were his brother Ciro, now dead; Professor Rapi, treasurer of the Camorra; Genaro Ibelli and one of the others. Alfano sat at the head of the table expecting every minute the messenger who would bear the tidings that Cuocolo had been killed. According to Jacovitti, the Camorrist had betrayed no perturbation. He drank his wine and joked with his guests, telling his modern ab ut a love affair.

As Alfano heard some of his conversation retold to-day he scowled darkly at the witness.

President Bianchi of the court had witnesses called earlier in the day to describe the manner of man that Cuocolo was. Associates of Cuocolo in Naples told of a murder in which he had taken part. It was shown that Cuocolo was a gay, happy-go-lucky disposition.

DIAZ PLEDGES HIS SWORD TO DEFENCE OF HIS COUNTRY

HAVANA, June 2.—The following wireless message was received to-day by General Bernardo Reyes from ex-President Diaz on board the liner Ypiranga:

"I am glad that you have finally resolved to proceed to Mexico and co-operate with Provisional President De La Barra and Francisco I. Madero in the pacification of our country. God grant that, with your patriotic influence and the support of your comprovincials of other parties, order may be speedily restored without further bloodshed. Mexicans must sacrifice party ties and personal ambition. They must close their ranks to prevent alien intervention. My heart is with you; my sword, if needed, is at the disposition of my country to help maintain its integrity."

FOUR KILLED BY PLUNGE OF AUTO

HARRISBURG, Pa., June 2.—William B. Harrar, a wealthy leather merchant, Clarence, Mrs. Robert W. Donalso and Mrs. Laura M. Harrar was endeavoring to avoid a collision with a speeding car.

EDITH DEACON GETS FORTUNE

Miss Edith Deacon, one of the beautiful and unfortunate Deacon sisters known on both continents as the "Three Graces," will not suffer for her long and fervent devotion to the right at the bedside of her father, George Lee Peabody, banker and member of the distinguished Massachusetts family, as a result of the will of the latter, which has shown their affection and appreciation for Miss Deacon by making over to her an annual income for life which is expected to render her entirely independent.

Miss Deacon's marriage to Mr. Peabody was twice postponed. The family of the young bachelor, however, took upon her as a relative. The young society girl has always been on the best of terms with Mr. Peabody. She is reported to have refused honorably from the young girl time after time, and has always been met in a quiet young manner.

The Peabody millions are sentimental reasons for the transfer of a considerable part of the fortune of the elder Peabody to Miss Deacon. The Peabody family contend that they are equally bound to protect the young girl the fortune which death has placed in their kinsman doing.

Mr. Peabody, his family state, intended to leave his entire fortune to his fiancee. That he did not do so was due to physical inability to sign the will. As he lay on his stretcher in the Johns Hopkins hospital at Baltimore Mr. Peabody, realizing that his time was short, directed that the will be drawn up leaving all to Miss Deacon, who had given up everything to be near him in the year or more of his illness. The will was never signed, for Mr. Peabody became so ill he could never carry out his wish.

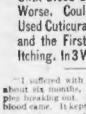
TO GROW HAIR ON A BALD HEAD

BY A SPECIALIST

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair. Why, having fresh, healthy hair, one should have to suffer from dandruff, itching scalp and baldness is a question that is answered by the following discoveries. Yet the cause is easy to find. Dandruff is caused by a germ which destroys the hair roots. Then comes falling hair, and finally baldness and to also Associated for remedying this trouble, is to destroy the germ, stopping hair from falling out, and developing the hair roots, so that a new growth will soon appear. This will make the hair grow thick, soft and glossy, as it was in its original color. ... Rex Rem, is supposed to ... Rex Rem, is supposed to ... Rex Rem, is supposed to

'ECZEMA ITCHED SO I COULDN'T STAND IT'

Began by Little Pimples. Scratched Until Blood Came. Kept Getting Worse. Could Not Sleep Nights. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the First Day They Relieved Itching. In 3 Weeks Eczema Cured.



"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more. I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gunpowder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (signed) Miss Elizabeth Golski, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910.

STRANGE HINDU DRUG GIVEN TO MRS. BULL ON HER DEATH BED

closed are now about to open and she appropriated it for you so eagerly and so greedily.

Then Mr. Whipple picked up the "mystical message" from Miss Celia Richmond? A—No.

Q—Did you find among Mrs. Bull's effects a mystical message in Mrs. Richmond's writing? A—No.

Q—Is she to testify here? A—She likely. Her deposition will be taken.

Q—How long has she been sick? A—Two or three weeks.

Reading of the letter was resumed.

"Ah, Olea, your mother has been standing outside that door with you in those years, but if I could only tell you all about it, all as I was allowed to see it, she had suffered with you unconsciously, instinctively, as if she had been the Wounded one. She asked me to tell you that my mother's picture and yours were associated among the flowers for the love she bore you. Ever lovingly,

MARGOT.

Then Mr. Whipple produced the paper which he said is a "mystical message" from Ole Bull and from Edvard, the dead grandchild. Mr. Whipple said that this "mystical message" is in Miss Celia Richmond's handwriting. There was discussion as to its admission. The letter was shown to Thorp. The following question was asked:

Q—Is that Miss Richmond's handwriting? A—I should think not.

Mr. Whipple then said:

In that case, since we can prove conclusively that this is in her handwriting, we will suspend it for the present."

Mr. Whipple then introduced a note written by Miss Noble to Olea on January 27 last, nine days after Mrs. Bull's death. This note was penned in ink on birch bark from Studio House, as follows:

To Olea—One day, probably early in December, your mother had been chatting with me about her memorials to one and another, when I said: "You make memorials to so many. Say—Sam—what is your memorial to Ole Bull?

Like a flash came the reply of her answer: "Olea's life is his greatest and best memorial."

Avalanche of Letters.

The major part of yesterday was taken up by counsel for the contestant putting in correspondence between Mrs. Bull and her mother. The avalanche of epistles had to be identified by Mr. Thorp. The majority of the letters were read by Attorney Ralph S. Bartlett, and Mr. Whipple cross-examined Executor Thorp minutely on pertinent passages.

"Did you not know that Olea thought Mrs. Bull was surrounded by people exerting baneful influence on her?"

"No," answered Thorp.

"And did you think," persisted Mr. Whipple, "that this congregation of Swami and Mrs. Briggs (Mrs. Marion Daniels Briggs of Waltham) and the Boston was entirely agreeable to her (Olea)?

"Yes, I emphatically," she always treated them courteously. She treated Miss Noble affectionately.

Mr. Whipple introduced a letter written by Mrs. Bull from Lake Sunapee, Lake Sunapee, Me., on December 9, 1910, as follows:

Dear Uncle Joe—I am sorry to have been so long in reply to your letters. The last one sent to Norway and then one when I was quite ill and the reply which I wrote seemingly not adequately expressed that I did not send it. Your second letter, received after my return, was even more disturbing to answer. The following question was asked:

Q—Is that Miss Richmond's handwriting? A—I should think not.

Mr. Whipple then said:

In that case, since we can prove conclusively that this is in her handwriting, we will suspend it for the present."

"Yes, I emphatically," she always treated them courteously. She treated Miss Noble affectionately.

Mr. Whipple introduced a letter written by Mrs. Augusta Bingham to Thorp from Lebanon, Me., on December 9, 1910, as follows:

Dear Uncle Joe—I am sorry to have been so long in reply to your letters. The last one sent to Norway and then one when I was quite ill and the reply which I wrote seemingly not adequately expressed that I did not send it. Your second letter, received after my return, was even more disturbing to answer. I do not understand what the foundation in your mind can be for your attitude toward me. Your remarks, twice emphasized, that I must feel myself bound to obey the request made of me without regard to their justice, does not certainly give out much hope for better things.

For myself I am only feeling sadness and sorrow at being placed in a position where I cannot help matters or stand between her and harmful influences.

Sympathy for Mother.

I am sorry that I can say that you should shut me out from my rightful place of sharing with you the responsibilities for my dear mother's treatment and plans. I am very thankful to see from mamma's letters that she feels a slight improvement in her condition, and I pray that her gain will soon be made permanent. It is heartbreaking to think of all she is going through.

Please give my love to you and Aunt Aude (Mrs. Thorp) and to the little girl. I hope you are all well with the hope that brighter days will soon dawn for mamma and with gratitude for all the loving attentions that you are all showing her and which I know give her great happiness. Always affectionately, OLEA

Replies to Niece.

Then he added: "Miss Noble's coming was the topic she (Mrs. Bull) needed."

Thorp also told Olea that Mrs. Bull would see her later. Then Mr. Whipple put a series of questions, thus:

Q—Was Dr. Odiorne managing Mrs. Bull at this time? A—Yes, two or three times a week.

Q—Was Miss Noble there? A—Yes.

Q—Was Mrs. Briggs? A—Occasionally.

Mrs. Briggs is Mrs. Marion Daniels Briggs of Waltham, friend of Mrs. Bull and interested in psychic studies. It was Mrs. Briggs who accused Mrs. May Wright Sewall of baneful influence over Mrs. Bull.

STORK PAYS VISIT TO NATHANIEL POTTERS

Back Bay and Brookline society was interested to-day to learn of the birth of a daughter to Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Bowditch Potter of New York. Mrs. Potter was Miss Mary Sargent, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of Holm Lea, Brookline. Dr. Potter is assistant professor of clinical medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. He is son of the late John Sabine Potter of this city, and is a graduate of Harvard Medical School. He married Miss Sargent on January 25, 1908, at St. Stephen's Church, Boston.

TO FIGHT MIMIC BATTLES IN JULY

The crack of rattle of musketry fire will resound throughout the northern and eastern sections of Middlesex and the western part of Essex Counties during the week of July 23. War will be declared on that date between divisions of the Massachusetts militia and mimic battles will be as fiercely fought as they were in the war maneuvres two years ago when the New York and District of Columbia National Guards mobilized at the same time as the National Militia.

Whether or not troops from other States will take part this year is not known, but Adjutant-General Pearson has made preparations for lively action on the annual tour of duty.

Through a letter to the Selectmen of the town of Wakefield from the adjutant-general requesting the use of the streets and camp ground during the manoeuvres in July, came the first intimation of the ground to be selected.

It is understood that the adjutant-general's office has also been negotiating for fields and camp sites north of Wakefield and in Reading.

This section of the State is naturally adapted for the operations of a large force of men, and with its large stretches of open country, its lakes and streams, and ample facilities for camping on high and dry ground, it far excels the land used two years ago along the South shore.

The decided lack of cultivated land throughout the section selected makes it all the more desirable and the large claims for damages against the Commonwealth, which proved to be one of the most undesirable features of the 1909 "war," are sure to be greatly decreased.

Out Now
New Victor Records for June

A superb list of musical numbers with four announcements of unusual interest.

Alma Gluck
now sings for the Victor

The latest addition to the galaxy of famous opera singers who make records exclusively for the Victor.

Her lovely, even, sympathetic voice is heard at its best in the two records just issued.

Two superb records by Mario Sammarco

Perfect specimens of Sammarco's singing. All the roundness of tone, the volume, the admirable phrasing and technique for which the baritone is celebrated are reproduced to perfection.

Vessella's Italian Band
plays three splendid selections

This dashing director with his famous band of soloists is one of Atlantic City's big attractions. His control over his band is remarkable—such precision and shading being quite unusual.

Lucia Sextette
at a popular price

A magnificent record of this universally admired concerted number, at the extremely low price of $1.25. Sung by the Victor Opera Sextette—the pick of the Victor's competent vocal staff.

Hear these records at any Victor dealer's, and ask him for a June supplement which contains a complete list of new single- and double-faced records, with a detailed description of each.

And be sure to hear the Victor-Victrola

Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N. J.

Always use Victor Records, played with Victor Needles—there is no other way to get the unequaled Victor tone.

ARMY AVIATORS HURT BY FALL

NICE, France, June 2.—Lieutenant Lucea and Lieutenant Hennequin, who was flying with him as a passenger, were seriously injured to-day when their aeroplane fell 250 feet. Lucea's legs were broken and Hennequin broke one leg. Both were badly cut and bruised. Lieutenant Lucea was a competitor in the Paris-to-Turin race. Investigation showed that the accident was due to the breakage in the structure of his aeroplane.

A dispatch from San Rossore stated that Frey had left there for Rome at 7:41 o'clock to-day. San Rossore is a few miles from Pisa.

CONNECTICUT SENATE FOR POPULAR VOTE

HARTFORD, June 2.—The Senate adopted a resolution that Congress be requested to propose an amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for popular election of United States Senators, if the House concurs, enough States will have acted to compel Congress to call a constitutional convention. The demand must come from thirty-one of two-thirds of all the States. New York was the thirtieth. Connecticut would be the thirty-first.

A BLOOD BUILDER

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cured This West Virginia Man.

He Was Anaemic and His Stomach Was in Bad Condition and Ordinary Remedies Did Him No Good.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded the decline in health.

Obscure influences, something unhealthful in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

In such cases a complete change of climate or of work will sometimes effect a cure. It takes a long time, however, and for the great majority of sufferers is out of the question.

Mr. G. E. Legg, of Tipton, W. Va., has found a method of treating weakness and bloodlessness, that is simple, cheap, within reach of everybody, and within the limits of his experience successful every time. He says:

"I have tested Dr. Williams' Pink Pills several times personally and they have never yet failed to build up the system and renew the blood.

"I used them on one occasion for weakness caused by a lingering malarial fever that began in the spring of 1895. The worst effects of this were indigestion and a bad state of my blood. I was anaemic, as the doctors say. People generally would say that I didn't have blood enough, or that I didn't have the right kind of blood; mine was too thin. My kidneys and liver were out of order. I was badly annoyed by sour risings from my stomach.

"I'm a good deal of pain, too, in my back and under my right shoulder blade.

"I was sick for over two years and for months of that time I was under the care of a physician, but his medicine did me no good. Meanwhile I learned of the cures that had been wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I owe my cure to their use and cheerfully recommend them. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have real merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. Send for our free diet and "Diseases of the Blood" booklets.

MRS. BELCHER, WHO ESCAPES JAIL IN CASE OF BIGAMY

WOMAN GUILTY AS BIGAMIST

Flossie M. Williams, who is also Mrs. Joseph Belcher and Mrs. Charles Lane, was sentenced to one year in the woman's prison at Sherborne for bigamy in Lynn District Court to-day, but the penalty was suspended and she was placed on probation. Judge Sweetser told her to return to live with Belcher, her first husband, at No. 21 Spring street, Stoneham. Belcher married her in 1905 and two children were born to them. She left him four years later and he learned she had married Lane, who was a corporal at Fort Banks, on September 25 last in Lynn.

Belcher got a warrant for her arrest in Lynn and Inspector William Thorne of the police department in that city took her into custody yesterday in Scollay square, this city. When she got to the police headquarters she declared she had no recollection of marrying Lane and said she must have been drugged or hypnotized. She wept and pleaded with the police to keep the knowledge of her plight from her parents.

Lane and the young woman did not live together long. The police say she has been working in a Boston department store. When she was arrested she gave her maiden name. She is a pretty woman and wore a big pinned hat and a stylish tailor-made suit. According to her statements her life with Belcher was unhappy and that is why she left her home and little ones.

MISS IRENE JUDKINS BRIDE AT WINCHESTER

Miss Irene Pelton Judkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Judkins of No. 72 Bacon street, Wedgemere, Winchester, was married to Arthur Chirley Kelley of Everett, manager of the diamond department of a Boston jewelry house. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George R. Hamilton. The bride, who wore a gown of white satin meteor trimmed with shower lace, was attended by her sister Mildred, who wore a gown of pale blue satin draped with spanish net. The Misses Margaret and Catherine Cutler of Newton Centre were bridesmaids. George H. Keller, a brother of the groom and professor of chemistry at Harvard, was best man. Following the wedding there was a reception.

BIG COTTON PLANTING FOR THE YEAR 1911

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The area of the cotton crop planted in 1911 in the United States, including that already and expected to be planted, is about 2017 per cent. of the area planted last year, equivalent to about 25,004,000 acres, as compared with 23,418,000 acres, an increase of about 1,586,000 acres, or 4.7 per cent, according to a report issued to-day by the department of agriculture. The condition of the growing crop on May 1 was 87.8 per cent. of a normal condition as compared with 80.2 per cent. at the corresponding date in 1910, and 80.9 per cent. the average condition for the past ten years on May 25.

BORROW STOLEN BATS FOR GAME

The rubber baseball game between the crack teams of the Volkmann and Noble & Greenough schools takes place in the National Baseball Grounds this afternoon—thanks to the energy and ingenuity of the father of the captain of the Volkmann team and the District Attorney's office.

As a result the little Glooms had a treat from the camp of the Volkmanns to-day and a wide-mouthed Joy is seated upon the shoulder of every member of that distinctive school and of their friends.

The public has not hitherto been allowed to know of the mental tragedy that has been going on all week in the Volkmann School. But the AMERICAN feels impelled to tell it.

Be it known that these two private schools are polite but aggressive enemies on the diamond. For two years the N. & G.'s have wiped up the field with their rivals. But this year a little auburn-haired chap named Chauncey Dolen, who was chosen captain of the Volkmann team, fooled the enemy. They have played two games, winning one each. The Big Show was slated for this afternoon.

Magic Bats Stolen.

When the Volkmann boys went to their clubhouse in Allston the first of the week they found that it had been burglarized. Bats, gloves, masks, sweaters, shoes and other paraphernalia had been stolen. The Volkmann boys were in despair, because there was no quick magic in some of the gloves and bats as there is cleverness in the players.

Then it was found that a real sleuth on the Brighton police force—Patrolman Francis A. Gorman—had seen four boys sneaking out of the Volkmann grounds with the plunder. He gave chase, caught one of the offenders and—got the valuable accoutrements.

Joys to the front—for just a minute! Chauncey Dolen and a contingent of the team went to the Brighton Police Station and tried to get their stuff. Nothing doing!

"Got to have it as evidence," said Captain James P. Sullivan.

The boys shed tears. But they left no clue.

Now the youthful father of Chauncey Dolen, Harry L. Dolen of No. 124 Glenway street and a member of the retail firm of Austin & Dolen of North street, heard of the trouble. He is a great golf expert and baseball enthusiast. Also he usually gets what he wants.

"I got to get those things if I have to steal 'em" said the elder Dolen.

Use Evidence in Game.

He went to the office of District Attorney Pelletier and laid the case before Mr. Fielding, an assistant.

"So, you see," said Dolen in conclusion, "we sure have to have those bats and gloves."

"You sure have," said Fielding.

The District Attorney's office told the facts before Captain Sullivan. It was arranged that the loot should be borrowed for this afternoon and returned after the game as evidence against the boys. It was all laid out in the front room of the station house early to-day ready for the Volkmann boys when they went for it.

The four boys who took the stuff are from East Boston. They will have a hearing next Tuesday. There can be no question, of course, that the Noble & Greenough rivals of the Volkmanns knew anything about the raid on the Volkmann lockers.

ONLY TWO BILLIONS IN OUR TREASURY

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Uncle Sam has nearly two billion dollars in gold coin in his safety vaults in the big treasury building. The piling up of gold coin and bullion in the vaults continues steadily. A little more than $1,815,000,000 is there—the highwater mark for the treasury's gold holdings. May's receipts from all sources exceeded $61,000,000 and beat April by a round $10,000,000. Expenditures, however, were held down to about $36,000,000, some $3,000,000 greater than last month.

BATHTUB MURDER SUSPECT STUDENT OF "NEW THOUGHT" CREED

SCHEIB, HUSBAND OF NEW YORK VICTIM, NOW BELIEVED VICTIM OF DELUSIONS.

lieved him to be a decent, respectable sort of a man.

"The last letter I had from Lily was dated November 22, and though I sent her a Christmas present she didn't answer. I wasn't able to make out just why, but she didn't, and I've been sort of uneasy ever since. But I never guessed the terrible truth."

Identifies the Prisoner.

O'Grady is a great, big man, six feet two and powerfully built. Her his grief over his daughter bowed him utterly and his face showed furrows that betokened a tremendous mental strain. He was taken in a side room in the District Attorney's office from which he could see a good view of Scheib, who was in the main room, and he identified the latter as he muttered to Commissioner Dougherty:

"Yes, that's the fellow; that's Hughey Sherman that married my little daughter." Mr. poor little girl.

Much additional information about the characteristics of Scheib was obtained in Springfield today from some of those who he victimized there in 1907, just before he burned his haul of $100 gave, put up by a friend, and left for New York. Scheib was known in the city of Springfield as Sherman.

This is the story told by Meyer G. Kinberg, tailor, of No. 352 Main street, Springfield:

"Sherman came to my store about three weeks before Thanksgiving in 1907 and told me that he wanted a nice suit made for his wife. I had known him for about three months. He had been engaged painting signs for a moving picture house here and I got acquainted with him in that way. I thought his transaction with me was funny from the start. He told me that his name was Charles Sherman, but he spoke the most fluent German of any man I ever met. I speak German myself and always talked it with Sherman.

"I never knew a German named Charles Sherman and so I was suspicious from the first. When he came in and wanted to make a fine suit for his wife I didn't want to refuse because he had the little girl with him and I did not want to offend her.

"I told him that I would require a deposit, a $10. He and his wife picked out a $35 blue broadcloth and Sherman gave me $5 on account. He said it was all that he had then, so I measured the girl and had made up the suit.

"She came to my shop several times to have the suit fitted and I could not help liking her. She was a slight little thing and the weighed not more than ninety pounds. She was very bright.

No Account at Bank.

"Sherman called for the suit on Thanksgiving morning. He still owed me $3 on it and he handed me a check for $30. The check looked 'too good.' It was on the Union Trust Company of Springfield and was drawn on the Union Trust Company of Springfield and was drawn on the Union Trust Company of Springfield and was drawn

RECIPROCITY GAINS AS U. S. SENATORS ARE PRODDED BY PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The reciprocity sales are beginning to brighten though the fight is not yet won and the guerrilla warfare against the pact is still going through with fresh sorties and shots.

Members are beginning to hear from home. There are some members of the Senate who are responsible to home sentiment though of course Root and Bailey and their ilk are not in that class. It is for the removal of such representatives of the big combines that constituencies is to be amended providing for the popular election of Senators.

Meanwhile the President is letting no hint of his views of the situation. For a time at least Senators have been...

The battle is narrowing down to a straight out fight between the business and the people who are groaning under the high cost of living. The latest news from the capital reeks of food and clothing prices and the one hand the right to keep up the tariff is presented as the other the...

Hold Balance of Power

Root, Burrows, Smoot, Lodge, Dillingham, Sutherland, Oliver, Simmons, William Alden Smith, Gallinger, Heyburn, Lorimer, these are political agents through whom are leading the fight. Behind each of them stands not the agricultural interests which it is claimed will be vitally injured by the exchange of food products between Canada and the United States, but the big industrial and sinister aggregations of capital which control wool, paper, sugar, iron, coal and all the other necessities. It is a point for the National Grangers to consider that these gentlemen without transportation facilities from the farms and forests products to rot on the farms which control the prices of wire fencing, agricultural implements, timber, baths and the thousand and one other necessities that are listed at top notch prices are consistently opposed to reciprocity. When did the interests of the farmer and consumer and wage?

Upon the demand for reciprocity Senator Cummins climbed to greatness. Something which may be termed the Wisconsin Idea also sprang up at the time, and its high priest was Robert M. La Follette.

Radical reduction of the tariff was the burden of his eloquent pleadings. Support few backed to the banners of the insurgents and insurgency was born to grow into a concrete entity.

In the civil duty of reciprocity's need when the only practical revision of the tariff can be in sight can be seen when the high cost of living may be found through the mighty hoof of the privileged of the corporations, this group of insurgents has the full power to vindicate for all time the insurgency stand. Unite the people them together.

HIRES braces, refreshes, renews the whole heat-burdened system. It's so good because it is just stored-up Nature. Roots and herbs, the fragrance of shrubs and flowers—without a trace of anything harmful. When a drink disagrees with you the chances are that there is something in it that shouldn't be there. There is nothing that isn't wholesome and pure in Hires. Nothing to irritate the digestion. That's why you can take it at any hour.

Say Hires to the Soda Fountain man. Needless to say rootbeer. Just Hires is enough.

MRS. MARTIN TELLS OF FLYING

"Women should try aviation. I believe that they can make more money at it than men; all it needs is a cool head, and they have that. Flying is the most wonderful sensation in the world, it is my greatest interest in life, I could not bear to settle down to humdrum existence without the excitement and thrill of it."

This is what Mrs. James V. Martin, the first woman aviator to come to Boston thinks of her calling. She is here with her husband, Professor Martin of Harvard for the Waltham aviation meet, where both intend to fly.

Mrs. Martin talks most entertainingly of her flights. Of her first trip alone in an aeroplane, she said:

"It was only the first week in May that I had one out alone for the first time. Of course I had been up in the air before that, but always as a passenger. This time I was making the circuit of the aerodrome alone for the first time, and I saw the top of a tree directly in front of me, and realized that I was sailing right into it. I didn't get especially frightened, because I realized that I must act instantly, so I set [illegible] in time to tell my aides [illegible] to [illegible] of the tree without [illegible] nothing. You see the only [illegible] I could was not straight, but a [illegible]

"I just love flying but I always did like excitement, and I could not help to have in such doses as just one plane.

"I was born in Africa," Mrs. Martin said, "and I have lived in Africa most of my life. I go for [illegible] a half. I have been living in Edinburgh with my husband [illegible] I used to go down to Hendon with him where he was practising, and he would take me around as a passenger. You [illegible] with a devilishly [illegible] and from then on I wanted to have a chance to [illegible] aeroplane also. [illegible] the weather was bad, and we had to wait a week after we got there before I had a chance to [illegible] I went [illegible] and get a chance to go out alone until just three Sundays before we sailed. The second Thursday after that I made my best record. I was out when I came down but I was so enthralled that I did not mind it."

WILLOUGHBY TO WRESTLE BURNS

Walter Willoughby, the crack Cleveland mid-weight wrestler who defeated Sam Anderson in a decisive manner last week will go against Cyclone Burns, the great Boston light heavyweight in a finish match at the Columbia Theatre to-night.

It looks as if Willoughby and outgrown the middle weight division, as he was able to toss Anderson over his head in his match with Anderson, and this weight will seem like a tough proposition for him to handle and won't be much difference between the men when they step on the mat.

Burns is recognized as the greatest rival of American [illegible] Boston Light Heavyweight Champion, while Willoughby is quite friendly on all the stumbled grapplers who have come out to the West. These men put on a long drawn out match in your city [illegible] and [illegible] to see it a fall and [illegible] In addition to the fact that the Cyclone is some more [illegible] Willoughby gave his partner [illegible] and is out to get some more [illegible] when they step on the mat together, and another record breaking crowd is assured.

Mullyn Was a Tip-Top Individual, but Bibberly Couldn't Warm Up to Him

By KENNETT HARRIS

Well, I don't call it even a "high class community," in Bibberly; we are too modest. At the same time we would called that, and, at the same time again, we have found that our characterization may give a wrong impression. Perhaps Tandy's is leader this it off. That not too darned high-class," says Landy.

When Marion [illegible] Butternut Knoll, Sam Barker, our real estate man, told Billy Fenwick that it was going to raise the tone of the place quite a little.

"The devil it will!" says Billy, rather nettled. "How do you make that out?"

"He's going to put up a fifteen or twenty thousand dollar house!" says Sam.

"Huh!" grunted Billy. "That's got a lot to do with it. I want to tell you that if this Simpson Individual"

"Mullyn," Sam corrected.

I don't care what his name is, Billy told him. "If he thinks he can come here and swell around and put on airs because he got a wad, he's going to find himself in error."

"He isn't that sort of a fellow at all, groaned Sam. "He's just as plain as an old shoe, and he told me, the first thing, that he wanted to settle down where the people were neighborly and didn't put on frills."

"Oh, I don't know," said Billy. "I guess Bibberly Heights can put on about as many frills as the next place if he wants to. He needn't take us for a bunch of rough necks."

An Unreasonable Set

Which, of course, was an unreason able some people can be. I suppose Billy had around what Sam had said about Mullyn's intention of elevating us with a twenty-thousand dollar house, but I'm pretty sure that it didn't excite any prejudice against the man.

We are liberal in our views, and, as long as anyone behaves himself, we don't care if he's worth a million. And, as a matter of fact, that house didn't cost much over [illegible] thousand.

Mullyn himself was a large and florid man, a loud and jovial laugh. He described himself as a "mixer," and he certainly was a willingness to mix on all occasions. He invited everybody up to [illegible] entertained us lavishly [illegible] was a good fellow. His wife was a [illegible] woman, and the Bibberly la[illegible] to persons without [illegible] They took her into the [illegible] club and the [illegible] and did all [illegible]

Would I have cared for Mullyn

And yet after those events mentioned previously in [illegible] the Mullyns were as rank outsiders as if they had lived [illegible] Certainly the Mullyns embraced and were embraced by the women. Mullyn was [illegible] shrinking backs and he would laugh at his neighbor's dull stories with them, but there was always a [illegible]

[illegible] your intercourse that he felt no less than we did.

"I'm in Dutch here," he said to Patsey at last. "Why?"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that," Patsey reconstructed politely.

"Yes, you have, I say of you said it," Mullyn agreed. "All the same, I'm in Dutch. Why? Don't be afraid of hurting my feelings. I want to know."

"You've got an idea, I'll bet. Let's have it."

Patsey considered a little while [illegible] he said, "I have an idea, but it may be an entirely wrong one. If you really want me to tell you, I'll tell you. You're not that rachitic gas system installed in your house; you're not a gasoline engine in your basement and pump your own water from your own well. Half of the time—two thirds of it—you ride in town in your own car, you ship your own meat and vegetables in and you're one of the completest out fits of gardening tools I ever saw."

"Too much side, eh?" queried Mullyn with bitterness in his tone.

Just Where the Trouble Lay

"Not at all," replied Patsey. "That isn't the idea. I don't believe that you begin to put on as much side as Murgatroyd or Parker. It's just the circumstance of your splendid isolation. Do you ever foam at the mouth when the gas company is mentioned? Do you ever denounce the robbers and blow around about the amount of your last month's bill? You know you don't."

"Why should I?" demanded Mullyn. "No reason on earth why you should," conceded Patsey. "It isn't a question of [illegible] side, it's a question of being in the same boat with us, of being animated by our common interests to sweep the grasping, conscienceless, criminal corporation from the face of the earth just as soon as we can get the courts to sustain our ordinance. Use same [illegible] hopelessly inadequate water supply. When did you ever entertain the crowd with a kick on that score?"

"Never, I grant," answered Mullyn. "I've got all the water I want and then some. I just start up the little old engine"—

"That will do," interrupted Patsey. "To continue the indictment you are wholly indifferent to the infamous train schedule foisted upon us by the arbitrary methods of the P. C. & G. W. You've got your car, so what do you care?"

"Not a tinker's malloon," said Mr. Mullyn.

"Neither you nor Mrs. Mullyn can appreciate the toughness and inferior quality of the meat Davis sells us," continued Patsey. "You don't know that lamb from [illegible] is an event in this community. What's more, you've got two servants who have been with you for years and the difficulty of getting any kind of help [illegible] is a sealed book to you. Very well. How can you be one of us in the face of all that? What bond of sympathy is there [illegible] me? Where is there a common ground of mutual interest? Did you ever [illegible] a spade or a rake or a lawn mower from one or any one else?"

"There might be something in that," Mullyn reflected, "but what can I do?"

"You might get the city water and the company gas laid into your place and [illegible] your cook and housemaid and chauffeur and try to regulate through ordinary channels," suggested Patsey.

"You can all go plumb straight and pour hasta to perdition," said Mullyn, emphatically. "It's bad enough living in this hole, anyway, even with the militating circumstances."

A couple of weeks later Sam Barker told us that the Mullyns were about to leave and their places were for sale.

"I guess getting five in the suburbs you must make up your mind to be a suburbanite, and that's all there is to it.

A Successful Wife

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

ESTHER CAREY, a poor girl whose parents are dead, leaving her with several young brothers and sisters to support, comes from Brackettsville, a suburb, to begin life in New York. She works her way up from a position as typewriter at $2 a week until at twenty-five she is head of her own office force in a Wall street sky scraper.

William Palsworth, a rich mining president, who has a neglected wife, falls in love with Esther and asks her to elope with him to the West. She refuses, and he becomes enraged. He learns that Stephen Kirkland, a nephew of the millionaire Wealthy Senator Bellars, is smitten with her, but he resolves to kill Kirkland if he can. Esther last Kirkland, who is one of her patrons, is a republic and not fit for any good woman to associate with. Kirkland decides to live at Brackettsville and take notes in the Hunter.

Kirkland, after a long courtship, wins Esther. She went to marry, but Senator Bellars, when he hears of it is enraged that Kirkland in his will [illegible] decides to earn his way by writing a book. They marry in New York and live in a boarding house in Washington Square. Stephen's secret disappointed when his book is rejected by the publisher and takes to drink. Under the influence of his evil genius Esther becomes jealous of Sinclair's influence over her husband, but the latter tells her Sinclair is "a fine fellow" and a great admirer of her. This makes her angry.

They go to the Adirondacks for a vacation. There is a beautiful girl there, Miss Pagee. She is [illegible] with Kirkland, who takes her out canoeing frequently. They go [illegible] and are lost, and do not return until 8 o'clock in the morning.

Kirkland tells Esther that he is going to be a very rich man. He has [illegible] through, but that he [illegible] to put up more margin for a deal which he [illegible] lend him what money [illegible] his in the bank. PART ONE—(Continued)

The Drowned Girl

NOBODY else seemed to want to, so I took my pipes [illegible] and stayed there, and laid her, with the girl's help, on the bed they got ready for her, and I did all that was to be done. Along about late night with the candles, somehow I didn't want [illegible] to help me, and I sort of felt [illegible] what she would have liked. I [illegible] her hair; I washed her and [illegible] her in the things her aunt sent, and it was queer, but not until then, when she was [illegible] I didn't make my heart break any more, did I think she was pretty. She had never been my kind, but [illegible] there so still, so patiently, in that long stillness, I saw what my husband had meant when he said, "She is [illegible] lesky beautiful."

Her wet clothes were drying on a [illegible] and as I picked up her waist something heavy fell out of it—a letter all soaked through: the one Mr. Kirkland had given her the morning he left for New York, on the Paul Smith's paper. It [illegible] heavy as lead in my hands. I took it over and put it on her breast, where she had worn it all that fortnight. It belonged to her—whatever it said—and I could take it with her where she was going. I was glad nobody else had found it, and I couldn't help but wonder what those fourteen days had been for her, and how she had stayed over at the last in one more hope of seeing him [illegible] I never wanted to know what that letter said. I understood that I didn't have any real right—I might have put my husband so far away from me that he could never get back. It might have made me despise him—and if he had been hard to her and cruel, somehow I couldn't have borne it, as she had there, as well as something else. If he had been more to her than I would ever know, I wanted to let the secret be.

Anyhow, nothing would ever bother her any more.

Everything was quiet down there at the boat-house: there was the sound of the lake just washing up around the boards, and once I heard a boat dragged up on the landing and a guide's voice. Some people were going out fishing early.

Sitting by her side that night it was hard to believe that she was a dead person. She seemed to have fallen asleep, nothing more. Little by little my husband and what she had to do with him just faded out of my feelings entirely as I looked at her lying there.

Then and there I forced myself to think over every hour of that long, dreadful day when the two had been out from four in the afternoon until three in the morning, and I faced it, and after a little I got up and kissed her forehead. It was sweet like a lily. I had taken off her rings and sent them up to her aunt, and her hands lay white and helpless, and I kissed them too.

I stayed there with her until half-past three o'clock, and then the people came and I went up to the hotel.

Kirkland Comes

It was Sunday morning, and there wasn't a soul in sight on the way up to the hotel, but by the time I reached the piazza the horn of the station stage blew off in the woods at the Paul Smith's turn. It always brought up the passengers from the east train, and I waited for it. When it swung around and up to the block I saw a man sitting by the driver, a man that might have been Mr. Kirkland. He was all hooded up in a duck, his hat jammed down on his head, and my first thought was "Good gracious, he isn't himself!" And coming like that on what had gone before, the day and the night, it seemed as though I couldn't face it, and I nearly ran down the piazza to escape into the piney woods. But Mr. Kirkland was climbing down off the stage stiffly and with difficulty, and as soon as he turned about and I saw his face it was clear he hadn't been taking anything, but that there was something else wrong. He lifted his hat to me with a bow, as though I were a great lady, and when I came up to him he smiled. He was almost as white as the dead I had left. His beard had grown out and his hair was long, and he looked as though he hadn't slept or eaten for ages.

"You're ill, aren't you?" I said "Lean on me."

And he answered "I will, my dear girl, gladly."

He leaned heavily on my shoulder, and we just crawled up to our room. He threw off his overcoat and his hat on the bed, and silently made a passageway with his hand around the room once or twice; then he said,

"To the four winds, Esther. To the proverbial four winds of heaven." Those who ruined wilde are more greedy than the four Jews I ever heard of! Have you got any cigarettes?"

First Slang Word

There was a package in the drawer.

He lit one, puffed it, threw it down, and took a fresh one. I sat down on the edge of the bed, and waited for him to tell me what was the matter. There were no signs of dissipation about him—nothing but great fatigue and terrible excitement. His hands were dreadfully dirty and stained with cigarettes. His nails were bitten down to the quick. Mr. Kirkland was so tall and impressive-looking that he had a way of filling up the place wherever he was, and the little upstairs room appeared too small for him as he filled up the window. He smoked something like himself, and then said:

"I'm busted, Esther!"

And it was the first slang or vulgar word I ever heard him use.

"I haven't a cent in the world—not a cent! Last week I was worth $200,000 though I didn't tell you, and hung on till the market closed yesterday, when I was wiped out."

I understood that if I didn't speak then—for he was staring at me eagerly—it I didn't say the right thing, he would be terribly angry and go all to pieces. He couldn't imagine, of course, how differently we looked at poverty. I had always been poor, and it was more strange to be well off to me than the old way. It was as though he had said that we'd get on a car and go back to some old place. I said:

"Well, to judge from the faces of the other gentlemen on the stage, you weren't alone in the smash up!" And, queerly enough, I had hit the right thing, for he actually laughed a little.

"Alone? I should think not. Peterson, who came up with me, failed for a million. The market has been insane—mad. You never saw such a scene and such confusion, for he told me all about it. 'Standard Oil' was offered on the Curb for 125, and couldn't get a bid. My broker went to pot; I might have pulled out otherwise." He waited a minute, then said: "But you don't seem to realize what this means to you and me"

"And I quite realize it," I said, quiet

Desperate Desmond

The Indians from Coyote Cal's Wild West Aggregation are going to scalp Desperate Desmond and his pals, who are all tied together in a bunch as it will be handy to get at them. But first the red men must do a little dance. They always do that. No scalping fee would be considered cheap without it. Indians are great sticklers for etiquette.

But hold! Here comes Coyote Cal himself, the manager of the show. He can't see any sense in pulling off a stunt like this out in the open where anybody can see it without paying a cent for it. He's going to put ads in all the papers announcing it as the star feature of the evening performance. If that doesn't draw a crowd, what will?

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

The easiest and quickest way to get Desmond and his wild men down to the show grounds is to roll the whole bunch down the hill. Of course, it may shake them up a bit, but they'll be so busy worrying about their scalps that they'll hardly notice that. There's nothing like a big trouble to take your mind off the small ones.

Here they come, rolling into the menagerie tent. They will be perfectly safe there, that is to say, they won't be able to get out, surrounded as they are by wild beasts who can be released from their cages at a moment's notice in case their help should be needed in subduing Desperate Desmond and his gang of aboriginal earthquake.

But here's another Wild Man of Borneo, and he's in a cage. His name is Ourit-Goutti, and he was kidnapped from the island years ago, and has been traveling with circuses ever since. This is the first time he has revisited his native land, and when he sees his countrymen in trouble he draws his knife and cuts their bonds.

Here's where the fun begins. The wild men on one side are fighting against the Indians and the cowboys on the other, and it's going to be some fight, believe us. Our brave hero is right in the thick of it, but Desmond sneaks away, like the coward he is, and takes Rosamond with him. If Claude survives the fight he will probably rescue her in to-morrow's pictures.

Woman as the Greatest Inventor in the World

It Is Folly, in This Day, for Any Man to Argue About the Inferiority of the Female Sex

By DOROTHY DIX.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

I HAVE a letter from a man who takes many pages of good paper to try to prove how superior man is to woman, illustrating his remarks, no doubt, by himself.

Nothing, it seems to me, is more foolish than to argue the relative superiority of the sexes. Men excel in one way; women another. Men were created for one purpose in life, women another. But which serves the better purpose in the world no human being knows. No hand is strong enough to hold the scales and weigh the two sexes.

Taking them by and large, it seems to me that they were cut off the same bolt of cloth, with pretty much the same amount of brains, the same amount of courage, and the same amount of weaknesses. Every great contention of the suffragist debate—that women are superior to men—disguising conceit of superiority we leave to the male donkey—but that we are equal with for the belief not that we are men, because we are entirely different from men and have feminine characteristics. That is why it is impossible for men to represent us at the polls.

One Foolish Argument

However, my correspondent's arguments to prove the superiority of man over woman are sufficiently humorous to be worth copying.

The first one is that men are superior because they have been the great inventors and have shown the greatest creative power.

Not at all, dear sir. You forget that woman creates man, and that in every little squirming, red-faced baby that she produces she turns out the most marvelous piece of mechanism that the world has ever seen. Men have made many ingenious and useful machines, but outside of the legendary Frankenstein no man has ever been able to construct a creature that lived and moved and breathed and talked and walked. Yet any kind of a little simple woman can do that.

Probably women never will invent things that will be the counterparts of the telephones and the telegraph. They will always give their great creative energy to the manufacture of the human race; but does that prove them the inferior of men? Is the machine greater than its maker?

Once I heard another man hotly debating the same subject, and a ridiculous argument of the superiority of his own sex, he cried out: "The female sex has never produced a Shakespeare, a Milton, or a Napoleon." Who did, then?" quietly asked one of the inferior sex.

The contention that women show their lack of ability and intelligence because they haven't been world leaders as men have been is ridiculous, because this present generation of women is the very first that has ever had even the ghost of a show at doing things. You might as well try to prove that women are inferior to men by saying we have never had A GREAT WOMAN PRESIDENT.

Women haven't even the right to vote for one.

It was long argued that women had not the ability to take a good education when every college door was shut to them, and it was even considered that it would render them unfeminine to be taught geography.

Now that women have been given a chance at the higher education the compulsion is not that they can't study like men, but that they dig so hard and grind at their books so persistently that they carry off all of the honors in the co-educational institutions.

My correspondent thinks the fact that there are no women Rockefellers or Morgans shows the superiority of man over woman, and that woman can't grasp the mighty principles of high finance.

How should they be able to do so when, until less than fifty years ago, a woman never had any property rights, and that the day she was married the law gave every cent she had to her husband to do with as he chose?

To know how to make money you must handle money, and the woman of the past never had a dollar that she could call her own, much less money with which to finance anything.

To the Front In Business

The average woman possibly couldn't run a trust, but if you give her twenty-five dollars to spend she can get more out of it than her husband can get out of fifty. Moreover, the business woman of to-day—and don't forget women haven't been in business for twenty-five years yet—are giving a pretty good account of themselves. They have been sufficiently successful to make a lot of men very sore at the idea of competition with women.

In actual achievement we have had our George Eliot and George Sands, our Mrs. Browning, our Rosa Bonheur, our Mary Proctor, our Mme. Curie, our Anna Shaw and our Hetty Green, and what these women have done is marvelous when you consider that every step of the way they have had to fight for even the bare rights to do what they have done.

More, what they have done is merely the prophecy of what many women will do in the larger liberty of the future.

Men had not accomplished much, either, in the days before they were granted an education, freedom to work and the right of self-government.

They Do Not Excel Here

Of course, men are superior in some things, and always will be. Prize fighting, for instance. No woman will probably ever be a champion, though Barnum & Bailey's strong woman does gymnastic exercises with an average-sized man instead of a dumb-bell. Nor will women ever show their superiority by paying $50 for a seat to see men hammer each other into pulp.

But, as I said in the beginning, it's silly to argue with man about his superiority. It's an innocent and harmless vanity, and makes him very, very easy for woman to work.

"I had started, but we ran out of coal, and now I shall have to begin all over again."

Two Classes of Skin Diseases.

A famous skin specialist says he divides skin diseases into two general classes—those which itch and those which do not itch. If the eruption itches, it is evidence to him that the trouble is eczema in one of its many forms. He begins by applying a soothing, healing lotion to stop the itching, and to cover up the sores so that air, dirt and disease germs are kept out. This can be done by any sufferer by simply buying a 10-cent box of Cadum and using it. Cadum is made from a standard prescription which physicians recognize as being of great value, not only in eczema, but in redness, pimples, blotches, rash, roughness, scaly skin, chafings, acne, sores, ulcers, eruptions, hives, tetter, itchy herpes, psoriasis, ringworm, itching piles, etc. Trial box, 10c.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, a young woman of great beauty, has been slain in her rich apartments in the Feldhaim Mansions. Rupert Osborne, her wealthy American suitor, is believed by all London to be the murderer. Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent and advises him to hide in Tormouth, a seaside village.

Furneaux, the great detective, is unaccountably agitated when assigned to the case, and his chief, Inspector Winter, resolves to watch him.

Furneaux learns from Hylda Prout, Osborne's secretary, that a dagger and a shawl, like the one used to kill Miss De Bercy, were missing from his private museum immediately after the murder.

Winter, following Furneaux, his own subordinate, learns that he was in Osborne's house and in the museum the very day of the murder.

Detective Clarke, also on the case, finds a letter which tells how Miss De Bercy was marked for death as a traitress by an anarchist society.

Chief Winter learns a new thing from the murdered woman's book: Furneaux was quarreling with Miss De Bercy a short time previous to the crime.

Furneaux goes to Tormouth, finds Osborne in pouring as Mr. Glyn, breaks into his room and discovers a letter which shows he is deeply in love with Rosalind Marsh, a girl he met at the theater.

He gets Hylda Prout, whom he knows to be in love with Osborne, to come to Tormouth. Her jealousy aroused, she writes Rosalind a letter which makes her act coolly towards Osborne. The latter, puzzled by the long, cool silence, sends a letter full of ice. He throws it out of the window and then, feeling that he has made a mistake, hastens out after it. It is restored to him by an Italian, who had picked it up. The Italian later tells Hylda that he himself put the lace in Osborne's bag.

The next day they all go back to London. In the girl who opens the door for the Marshes, Detective Clarke recognizes Hylda Prout, who had been Miss De Bercy's maid. He makes her give up a book, which turns out to be Rose de Bercy's diary and in which the last entry is:

"If I am killed this night it will be by —— or by C. E. F." Where the blank occurred the name had been scratched through with pen and ink.

At the adjourned inquest, the jury brings in a verdict of "willful murder by some person or persons unknown." As Osborne leaves the court, the mob hoots execrations. Rosalind cries a protest of "Shame, oh shame!"

A Letter

FOR now her woman's bosom smote her with truth, and her compassion championed him. She believed in him, refused to admit that he could have been so base. If she had been near him she would have raised her veil, and gazed into his face with a steady smile!

For now her woman's bosom smote her with truth, and her compassion championed him. She believed in him, refused to admit that he could have been so base. If she had been near him she would have raised her veil, and gazed into his face with a steady smile!

As she was about to enter the carriage that awaited her, someone said close behind her:

"Miss Marsh."

She looked round and saw a small man.

"You know me," he said—"inspector Furneaux. We have met and spoken together before—you remember the old man who traveled with you in the train from Tormouth? That was myself in another aspect."

His eyes smiled, though his voice was respectful, but Rosalind gave him the barest inch of condescension in a nod.

"Now, I wish to speak to you," he muttered hurriedly. "I cannot say when exactly—I am very occupied just now—but soon. . . . To speak to you, I think, in your interests—if I may. But I do not know your address."

Very coldly hardly caring to try and understand his motive, she mentioned the house in Porchester Gardens. In another moment she was in her carriage.

Was Very Silent

When she reached home she saw in her mother's face just a shadow of inquiry as to where she had been driving during the forenoon; but Rosalind said not a word of the inquest She was, indeed, very silent during the whole of that day and the next. She was restless and wofully uneasy.

Through the night her head was full of strange thoughts, and she slept but little in fitful moments of weariness. Her mother observed her with a quiet eye, pondering this unwonted distress in her heart, but said nothing.

On the third morning Rosalind was sitting in a rocking-chair; her head laid on the back, her eyes closed, and with a motion corresponding with the gentle to and-fro motion of the chair her head moved wearily from side to side.

This went on for some time; till suddenly she brought her hand to her forehead in a rather excited gesture, her eyes opened with the weak look of eyes dazzled with light, and she said aloud:

"Oh, I must! . . ."

Now she sprang up in a hurry, hastened to an escritoire, and dashed off a letter in a very scamper of haste.

At last, then, the floods had broken their gates, for this is what she wrote:

My dear, my dear, I was brutal to you that night at the sun-dial. But it was necessary, if I was to maintain the severity which I felt that your lack of frankness to me deserved. Inwardly there was a terrible weak spot, of which I was afraid; and if you had come after me when I left you, and had commanded me, or prayed me, or touched me, no doubt I would have been all up with me.

Forgive me, then, if I seemed over harsh where, I'm afraid, I am disposed to be rather too infinitely lenient. At present, you see, I quite lack self-restraint to keep from telling you that I am sorry for you. . . . I was present at the inquest. . . . It is like lightning; it flits, it turns up, it enlightens . . . . see me here struck with it! . . .

You are not without a friend, one who knows you, judges you and acquits you. . . . If you want to come to me, come! . . . I once thought well of a Mr. Glyn, but, like a fiirt, will forget him, if Osborne is of the same manner, speaks with the same voice. . . . My mother is usually good to me. . . .

She inclosed it in a flurry of excitement, ran to the bell-rope, rang, and while waiting for a servant held the envelope in the manner of one who is on the very point of tearing a paper in two, but halts to see on which cheek the wind will hit.

In the midst of this suspense of indecision the door opened; and now, straightway, she hastened to it, and got rid of the letter, saying rapidly in a dropped voice, confidentially:

"Pauline, put it in the pillar-box at once for me, will you?"

Another moment and she stood alone there, with a shocked and beating heart, the deed done, past recall now.

Looked at Envelopes

As for Pauline Dessault, she was half way down the stairs when she chanced to look at the envelope. "Rupert Osborne, Esq." She startled! Everything connected with that name was of infinite interest to her. But she had not dreamt that Miss Marsh knew it, save as everyone else knew it now, from public gossip and the papers.

She had never seen Rosalind Marsh or her mother, till the day of their arrival from the country. It was but ten days earlier that she had become the servant of a Mrs. Prawser, a friend of Mrs. Marsh's, who kept a private boarding house, being in reduced circumstances.

Then, after but an interval of peace and security the Marshes had come, and as Pauline soon in, and were being embraced by Mrs. Prawser, Inspector Clarke had appeared at the door, nearly striking her dead with agitation, and demanding of her the diary, which she had handed him.

Luckily, luckily, she had been wise enough before that to scratch out with many thick scratches of the pen the name that had been written by the actress before the initials C. E. F. In that passage where the world appeared: "If I am killed this night it will be by —— or by C. E. F." But suppose she had not shown such cunning and daring, what then? She shivered at the thought.

And a new problem now tortured her. Was it somehow owing to the fact that Miss Marsh knew Osborne that Inspector Clarke had come upon her at the moment of the two ladies' arrival? What was the relation between Miss Marsh and Osborne? What was in this letter? It might be well to see. . . .

Undecided, Pauline stood on the stairs some seconds, letter in hand, all the high color fled from lips and cheeks, her breast rising and falling, no mere housemaid now, but a figure of anguish for an artist to sketch there in suspense, a well-molded girl of perfect curves and graceful poise.

Then it struck her that Miss Marsh might be looking out of the window to watch her hurrying with the letter to the pillar-box a little way down the street, and at this thought she ran downstairs and into the street to the pillar-box, raised her arm with the letter, inserted it in the slot, drew it out swiftly and hiddenly again, slipped it into her pocket, and sped back to the house.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PAY NO ATTENTION TO IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and have been keeping company with a young man the same age.

I kept company four months. We parted and became reconciled, but he acts very coolly.

I have a cousin fifteen years old, and he shows her much attention. I love him very much.

Now, Miss Fairfax, will you kindly advise me what to do?

C. M. B.

YOU do not look for friendship by paying absolutely no attention to what may be merely a passing fancy on the young man's part.

Do not worry about this, but remember that you, too, will change many times before finding the man worthy of your affection.

Demand nothing of this man; try to conquer your feeling toward him, and by being perfectly natural and friendly you can regain his favor.

DON'T RUN AFTER HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young man six years my senior. I have known him three years.

Every time I met him I have a girl friend with me, and he seems to pay the same attention to both of us. I would like to get his whole attention.

Now, Miss Fairfax, he does not know I love him; how could I make it known to him? ANXIOUS.

HE will like you better if you do not run after him. As a rule, a man knows instinctively when a woman cares for him, and I am afraid there is nothing for you to do but wait and see if your love for him is reciprocated.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the last four months. He has taken me to many places of amusement. I care for him very much, and I know that it is reciprocated.

As his birthday falls before mine, I do not know whether it is proper or not to make him a gift.

What would be proper as a gift? He has never given me anything of value. X. Y. Z.

IT is better not to give the young man any present whatsoever. You may receive small gifts from him, but it is not proper to return them.

Do Not Talk Too Much About Yourself

Rather Learn to Listen and Lead Others to Talk, If You Would Be Popular

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

WHATEVER you have done, are doing or mean to do, avoid making yourself the centre of conversation in a room where two or three, or more, are gathered together for enjoyment.

If you are forced to talk of yourself, by the united wishes of the group, then make the story you have to tell as concise as possible, and end it the moment you see the least sign of flagging interest in your hearers.

A young woman sat in a drawing room, where a particularly bright bevy of people had congregated. Almost everybody present was SOMEBODY, either in the art, financial or social world. The young woman came late, just as the hour for dispersing was near. The hostess introduced her, giving her recent achievement in an art line mention.

This called forth a pleasant word of commendation from one of the company who had heard of the young woman's work. Whereupon, feeling she occupied the centre of the stage of attention, the young woman began to thus the subject right upon herself, and to dilate upon her own achievements.

Talked On and On

She possessed a certain degree of wit, and made a remark which called forth laughter. Still further encouraged, in her belief in herself as THE personage in the room, she talked on and on, relating what she had done and how she had done it, and what people had said of her; and, not satisfied with this, she proceeded to go back to her earlier days and relate all her trials before success came.

The temporary interest she had excited in her listeners died out; they became distrait and uneasy; they looked at their watches and showed an inclination to rise at the first pause in the recital.

But no pause came. The young woman had become intoxicated with the subject of SELF, and was oblivious to every indication her audience exhibited of weariness and ennui.

Finally, the distressed group, who took in the whole situation and felt the discomfort of her guest, broke in with an apology for having to leave the room to give a telephone message of importance, and this gave her guests an opportunity to make their exit.

The self-intoxicated young woman went out with the others, still talking on the one subject which interested her.

No one in that circle desired to meet her again, and the hostess made a mental resolution to avoid including her to any invitations she might send out in future.

In filling up a room one enormous piece of furniture which makes little space for others is to be avoided. And in gathering a circle of friends one person who is like to monopolize the conversation and read others to the wall is equally out of line mention.

The Part of Wisdom

A young and beautiful woman of impressive appearance, gifted with a great mind, has been known to utterly ruin chances of success in the world of art by relating to everyone she encountered the compliments paid her on her mind and her beauty.

It is not wise even to one's nearest and dearest relative, friend or lover, to repeat compliments.

Sometimes a mother or an older woman filled with color hearing a young woman recount these triumphs if they are told modestly, and if she is sure they are not mixed to every passer, thereby rendering the teller ridiculous or tiresome.

But only under the most exceptional conditions should these things be told. Let others praise these and you are on safe ground.

But to the degree that you talk to others of subjects interesting to them and find them to talk, instead of obliging them to listen, you will be popular and your society sought.

The surest way to prepare for a friend, be he many life, one year in advance, is to talk continually of yourself.

JOKE MAY BE FATAL TO VICTIM

With his right arm broken and suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and numerous minor injuries, Fred P. A. Patree, fifty, of No. 26 Liverpool street, was found unconscious early to-day on the deck of a towboat tied up at York's coal wharf off Border street, East Boston, where he had lain for six hours before he was discovered.

Patree is employed as a fireman on the tug and about 10 P. M. started to ascend a ladder to the steamer Hamilton Matthews. He had nearly reached the top when somebody pulled the ladder from under him and he fell to the deck. His head struck heavily against the rail of the tug and he was rendered unconscious.

He was unconscious at 4 o'clock this morning when Thomas Cadora, watchman on the wharf while making his rounds, gained over the edge of the dock and was looking on the deck. An ambulance was summoned and Patree was removed to the East Boston Relief Hospital where his condition is said to be serious.

AUTO OUTING FOR CITY CHILDREN

"Children's auto-ride day," which is to be June 5, will be a great event for little ones in Boston and vicinity. More than 2,000 children residing at their homes or in institutions in this city will be taken in automobiles for a day's outing at Sharon Heights. Chester I. Campbell, manager of the Merchants Automobile Club, and the Rev. Dr. M. R. Deming are the men who have planned to make a holiday of it. Then happy sort to do all they wish more automobiles are needed. At least 500 cars will be required, and while the best day for days at least 150 more auto owners should volunteer at once and send their machines for assistance.

It is an event worth having a share in. Many of the children will take their first ride in an auto, and their happiness will repay anyone who lends his car. Owners of cars who would like a little more pleasure and be rewarded by remembrance in childhood prayers for all time should send their names to the chairman of the children's outing should write or telephone to Mr. Campbell at the Boston Merchants Club making this event an annual one.

A Flag for Each Child.

This year the recipients of little ones will be divided into ten divisions. From the Kindergarten for the Blind, 100 children will be taken, 100 girls will go from the Perkins Institute for the Blind, 100 from the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, fifty from the Leopold Morse Home, fifty from the Lincoln Street Nursery, fifty from the South End Nursery, fifty from the Longwood Temporary Home, 100 from the Rosert S. Shaw House, 100 from the vicinity of Dorchester avenue, 100 from the North End, sixty from the Syrian colony on Tyler street, 200 from the Moore Neighborhood House, Cambridge, 100 from the Hughes Settlement Neighborhood House, thirty from the Peabody Home for Crippled Children, fifty from Barnard Memorial and other institutions.

Three hundred children will leave at 9 a. m. from the State House and other children will leave from a central point in other sections of this city.

Each child will carry a flag, the gift of James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks.

Games for Chauffeurs.

The crippled children will be taken to Lakeshore House, Sharon Heights. The others will be assigned to a neighboring grove, which is beautifully situated on the shore of Lake Massapoag.

The five hundred chauffeurs will find quarters at Berkhardts grove, where games and other attractions will be arranged for their entertainment.

Many valuable prizes have been contributed by Boston business firms and will be awarded for excellence in athletic sports.

The boys will play ball and the girls will take possession of the swings seesaws and other attractive features of the grove. On the lake, twenty-five boats owned by men of careful carriage will give pleasure to the boys and girls.

Two luncheons will be served during the day.

Unless 150 autos are forthcoming, many children will be deprived of this outing and Mr. Campbell hopes that this number will be loaned before June 5.

TO-DAY'S STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The immediate future of the stock market will depend very largely on the weather and a generous crop will drive the bears to shelter in great crowds.

The bear party is making the serious mistake of underestimating the importance of the unusually large supply of cheap money and the further fact that, instead of the increasingly large output of gold being exported to Europe and Canada, it is all going into commercial channels.

Every professional trader in State Street is absolutely sure a stock market is about to collapse and practically every one of these persons admits modestly that he never made a million in a really great crisis such as is now upon the country. Some of these men have lost their shirts as Worcester and others away out to Albany. Their experience is worth little before, very valuable when applied to the country as a whole, and undoubtedly in the next year or two will see the beginning of another great industrial boom which promises to be greater than ever before.

The real State Street, which knows the country, recognizes that the fundamentals are sound and tolerates pessimists chiefly because, with their short sales, they are helping to give a rich reward to optimistic sports upward. It must be admitted, however, that the crops rain and, most of cotton, corn and wheat are all in want of it.

The readiness of capital to join in new enterprises is shown by the fact that the $25,000,000 of bonds just offered by the Union Pacific system was oversubscribed ten times. An issue of $10,000,000 of Baldwin Locomotive preferred stock, which will be made in the near future, has already been oversubscribed three times.

Such railroad figures issued are favorable. New York Central lines reported for April a gross gain of $831,822, with a net increase of $279,862. The Pennsylvania, by reducing operating expenses, converted a gross loss of $32,714 for the month on lines east of Pittsburg into a net gain of $585,129. The Northern Pacific converts a decline in gross of $1,177,294 into a net increase of $126,000. Other roads will make similar reports and the economies ordered when the Interstate Commerce Commission cut the rate will mean an advance of freight rates are now being felt in earnings.

The upward movement of Atchison may be interfered with temporarily by the buying on the decline showed that investors are strongly attracted by the belief that it is a good purchase on all recessions. The earnings for March were very freely as they are afraid of it. It ought to be one of the first stocks to make a recovery.

Union Pacific is in no pressing need for new funds since it received the $25,000,000 bond issue the sale of which added to the working capital of the company is very large; the first it is thought to in the neighborhood of $30,000,000. There is no doubt now that when the Union Pacific stock is put on the 4 readily enough and at a low price, too.

Some of the wage contracts of the independent steel companies expired last month, and it is probable that cuts will then be made unless business improves greatly. However, as a matter of fact some reductions have already been made, for in many mills workmen are working on a sliding scale, so that the cut in prices has brought a reduction in their wages. It is believed that the managers of the Steel Corporation have not contemplated any cuts at the present, but that they now propose to maintain the scale of wages as they did a two years ago when the declination of the steel export market was from 30 per cent, averaging 10 per cent. In the independent mills. As far as not caused by the conditions are concerned consideration of wages is dependent on the amount of business that comes in on the lower scale of prices.

HILL STOCKS RULE MARKET

NEW YORK, June 2.—The stock market opened strong to-day with the Hill stocks still featured by their activity. Northern Pacific opened up one point and Great Northern preferred went up 1½. The influence of the superior strength in the shares of the Hill system permeated the entire market, the most important issues showing gains in the initial trading.

The London market reflected the strength shown in New York, cables reporting that American railway shares were firm and the most active department on the London exchange. The statement of James J. Hill that the $800,000 secured under the refunding mortgage on the Great Northern property would be used to bring the line to the highest point of efficiency possible and pursue new construction gave an impetus to the market which traders believe will be felt for some time.

The following other gains were made: R. R. T. S., Steel common ⅝, Atchison ⅜, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅝, Union Pacific ⅜, Reading 1.5, Southern Pacific ⅛, and N. Y. Central ⅛.

The confidence shown by Mr. Hill in the future of the country, its business and his railroads inspired the belief in some quarters that the grand scale of improvements undertaken by the great Northern system would be followed by other roads of the country and many millions will be spent.

So pronounced was the firmness during the first few hours of trading and so great was the volume of buying orders that many traders made new high records for the year. The close was strong after active and irregular. American Tobacco rose 2½ points. Americans in London were strong.

ACTRESS MISSING AFTER LOVE QUARREL

NEW YORK, June 2.—William White, of No. 413 East Sixtieth street, has reported to the police that his sister, Elizabeth Marian White, an actress, known on the stage as Lillian Laverie, is missing. He said a letter from her indicated her intention of committing suicide. A general search was sent out for the girl. "I'm afraid Lillian has killed herself because of a disagreement with a young man, a Yale student, who has been devoted to her for a long time, and to whom she was engaged," said White.

FIND WASHINGTON COAT OF ARMS IN OLD ENGLISH ABBEY

LONDON, June 2.—The coat of arms of George Washington's family has been discovered in Selby Abbey, according to Dr. Sollowway, Vicar of Selby. The American flag originated from these arms, the doctor states. He says he is following up several clews and hopes to be able to show the connection of Washington with Selby. There is no doubt, he declares, about the correctness of the identification.

GALVIN GIVEN WARM WELCOME

C. O'Connell Galvin, special commissioner of the Sunday AMERICAN, who was sent to Ireland to report the great fight being made for Home Rule, has been received by a committee composed of a number of meetings to which he has been invited and at which he has made brief addresses. One of the big gatherings attended by Mr. Galvin was held at the National Club in Belfast, at which Joseph Devlin, M. P., presided.

The part taken in the meeting by Mr. Galvin was reported in the Irish News and Belfast Morning News as follows:

The chairman then introduced Mr. Galvin, of Boston, U. S. A., who, he said, was one of the bravest, most devoted, and efficient workers for Ireland in the United States—(applause)—and one of the secretaries of the District Council of the United Irish League. (Hear, hear.) He was not here on political business; he was the representative of a great organ of newspapers, with over four million readers in America—(applause)—and had come over at the kind invitation, to see the city for himself and to meet the Nationalists of Belfast and the surrounding districts.

An Irish-American's Views.

Mr. Con Galvin, who was received with cheers, said that, standing for the first time in the city of Belfast, his first word was one of congratulation to the Nationalists of the city on the splendid leadership which they had in the person of one who had won the admiration of every Irishman in America. (Applause.) In the United States, from New York to San Francisco, there was not an Irishman who did not envy Belfast in the possession of Joseph Devlin. (Applause.) He trusted, and every one of the Irish race trusted, that the day was not far off when the services of Mr. Devlin would be lost to Irish politics there. He (Mr. Galvin) had come to this side of the Atlantic, after an absence of a quarter of a century, in the exercise of his duty as a journalist, to note the changes which had taken place in Great Britain and Ireland, and especially to remark the progress which the people of Ireland had made during the years. What struck him most was the beginning of the Irish National Movement; and when he had witnessed in the House of Commons that Saturday night the most effective proof which he could obtain that the people of Ireland had moved along at a most amazing rate of progress. (Applause.)

He had heard ministers of the government rise one after another, and on the floor of the House of Commons openly and unreservedly declare their conversion to the cause of Ireland and her right to self-government. What in itself was a mighty indication of the rate of progress which the Irish people had been in Ireland for the past few days and weeks was the most wonderful change which had taken place in the material conditions of the people. (Hear, hear.) He had only yet twice touched on the fringe of his observations in Ireland, but from what he had seen he could tell the American people that every dollar which had been sent to Ireland in support of the Home Rule cause had produced ten-fold interest and more per cent. (Laughter.) He was delighted to see the splendid response which the Nationalists of Belfast had made to the appeal which had been made for the Parnell Fund. He did not know that even in the largest cities of America, if an ordinary committee meeting as that was, such a response would be possible.

Their action that night should be a stimulus to the people of every corner of Ireland, and it undoubtedly would be a stimulus to the exiled sons and daughters of their race to continue to hold up the banner of Irish Party, and not to waver when their country's cause was at stake, or when the party history, if theirs. They in America were not divided into sects and parties and creeds. We have them, it is true, openly and unreservedly, but they were not divided by religious differences. Irish representatives amongst whom their differences were unknown. That was so brilliant a member of Congress, whose story of the Irish race in our country would go down to history, and would be read by future generations as the story of one of the most epoch-making struggles in human history. He had had gentle peer opportunities than the average man to meet with men who were not in the Irish cause—men of the highest positions in the United States, the heads of universities and large commercial interests, and it was amazing to note the keen interest and attention with which they were following the progress of the Irish Party (cheers) and its populace. The group of men—he cared not which—who were sowing the seeds of dissension or faction were despised, and the world would be execrated by Irishmen the world over. (Cheers.)

The Irish people in America wanted the people of Ireland to be united upon the question of the dissensionists and factionists was to be deprecated by every Irishman (cheers) and every person. (Applause.) But he had not come there to waste his time on any of the sections of apostles of dissension. They had come to be given information that would enable them to give ample demonstration that in Belfast they were the true centre of Irish patriotism. They could not imagine the pride with which he (Mr. Galvin) as an American watched day after day the progress of the general election, and how the people of Ireland and the country had repudiated faction and had rallied round the flag, with the exception of one miserably-led section. (Hear, hear.) Only the day before he left Boston he had received a cablegram from Mr. Devlin to the effect that the result of the election was a victory which again gave Joseph Devlin to West Belfast and Ireland. (Cheers.) In conclusion, he said he was delighted to have had the kind and thoughtful face to face with the people of Belfast and Ireland, and as a humble representative of the United States of America, he thanked them from the bottom of his heart for the splendid example of patriotism which they had that night afforded. (Applause.)

The first of the series of articles which Dr. Galvin will write for the Sunday AMERICAN will be printed in next Sunday's issue. It is a graphic story of scenes in Parliament and his first glimpses of New Ireland.

SKILLED LABOR IN BIG DEMAND

Labor conditions in Boston are so good, the officers at the State Free Employment Bureau say, that employers in general are experiencing great difficulty in getting competent and reliable skilled help at the wages offered to-day. The demand for labor at the bureau exceeds by far that of any similar period during the last four years. In an official statement issued on local labor conditions, as viewed from the bureau to-day, it is said that:

"We have a large demand for painters (all kinds); carpenters (all kinds), wheelwrights, tailors (all kinds); agricultural help (gardeners, milkers, teamsters); factory help (female), stitchers, mill help (children), housemaids, hotel and restaurant help, all of which may be said to be unusual. The demand for help skilled in the building and industrial trades and agricultural pursuits.

"Employers, generally speaking, are experiencing great difficulty in securing competent and reliable skilled help at the wages offered. The army of general and skilled help is exceedingly large, and is constantly increasing."

What Reciprocity Means to America

To Vote Against It Is to Vote Against Every Honest Interest on This Continent

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

President Taft, acting wisely and honorably, in accordance with the election pledges, advocates a reciprocity treaty with Canada, our northern neighbor.

It was courageous as well as honorable in Mr. Taft to introduce this measure in his important message and to work for it ardently, as he has done.

Those that are narrow-minded and short-sighted will say that the President has shown lack of political wisdom. They will say that the Democrats, controlling the House of Representatives, will get the credit for reciprocity—as a big step toward tariff reform—and that Taft will get only the dislike and hostile votes—at the next election—of those in his party whom reciprocity offends.

Doubtless Mr. Taft has made some enemies by his courageous stand. But the people of America are not fools. The ordinary voter, the average mechanic and farmer, will prove more intelligent in the long run than the near-sighted political prophet. Reciprocity with Canada will win, and Mr. Taft will have the glory and the political credit of a brave act—no decent Democrat would and no other Democrat could take from him the credit that is his.

We shall write often of this important step in wise legislation, for nothing more vital to the country has come up for discussion in many years.

Canadians, and we of the United States who call ourselves Americans, live together as friends and neighbors on this continent, respecting each other's rights and desiring each other's good will. Our interests are the same. We want to see Canada prosperous, and Canada would rejoice in our prosperity. We want to trade with each other, to do business with each other more and more—with as little obstacle between Canada and our country as possible.

We have many things that Canadians want, and they have many things that we want. We look forward to the day when this whole North American Continent will be one great nation, as it should be.

But we do not suggest "annexing" Canada—that would be impertinent and impossible, except as the result of conflict abhorrent to every decent man. We have in our hearts no thought of annexing Canada or of committing any national theft—but we should be very glad and very proud if one day Canada would kindly annex us. In other words, Canada, when she is ready, can step into the great well-known firm of U. S. & Co., and take her place as a full partner, and a very welcome partner. It would be like taking an admirable first-class young business man into a big first-class firm—the transaction equally honorable to both partners.

Canada would have her own say, as she now has, in her own affairs—as Texas or Maine has—and she would also have her full say in the legislation and elections that control the destinies of this continent. She would lose nothing, no fraction of autonomy—she would gain her partnership in a big concern while giving up nothing.

This we say with all deference to Canadian ideas and Canadian susceptibilities. If for any reason Canada does not care for the proffered partnership and prefers to stick to the old London house—acting as a distant sub-station of the empire rather than become an integral and ultimately almost a dominating part of the big Republic—well and good.

United or separate, we want to be friends with our northern neighbors. We want to tear down tariff and other barriers as rapidly as we can, and to make of this great northern continent at least a united commercial whole, while hoping that it will ultimately become—through good will and confidence on both sides—a political unit of free men.

The treaty of reciprocity will bring all good men on this northern continent closer together. It will help all business and all consumers of life's necessities, widening all markets—hurting no one unless it be some monopolist eager to restrict the supply in order to supply the demand at extortionate rates.

Each reader of this newspaper ought to write to his Congressman and to his Senator at Washington and urge the passage of the Canadian reciprocity measure.

Those that oppose any forward step in legislation praise this reciprocity measure—WITH THEIR OPPOSITION.

The worst two men in the Senate—Root, who represents corporations, as a New York Senator, and Bailey, who, with about one-thousandth part of Root's ability, represents corporations as a Texas Senator—those two are against reciprocity. They are also against election of Senators by the people and against every other good effort.

Standard Oil's Bailey and Tom Ryan's Root are against reciprocity. You who read this newspaper have the power to make it impossible for them to deliver you as well as themselves to the trusts this time.

Write to your Senator and Congressman. Back up the President in one of the most courageous acts of any President—and in writing to advocate reciprocity don't fail to express your attitude toward those that oppose it. If you have not time to write a letter cut this out and mail it, marked simply, "O. K."

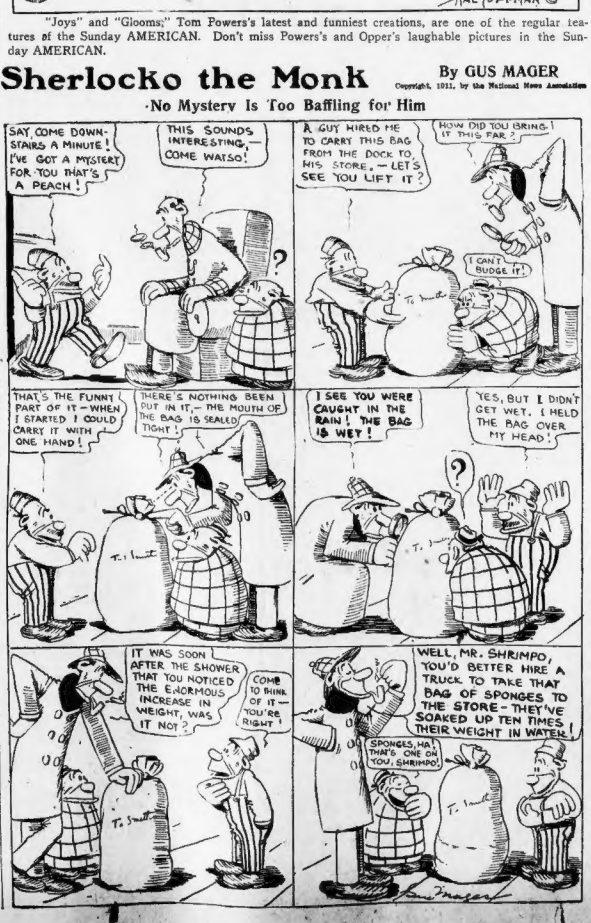
No Mystery Is Too Baffling for Him



SAY, COME DOWN-STAIRS A MINUTE! I'VE GOT A MYSTERY FOR YOU THAT'S A PEACH!
THIS SOUNDS INTERESTING,— COME WATSO!
A GUY HIRED ME TO CARRY THIS BAG FROM THE DOCK TO HIS STORE.— LET'S SEE YOU LIFT IT?
HOW DID YOU BRING IT THIS FAR?
I CAN'T BUDGE IT!
THAT'S THE FUNNY PART OF IT—WHEN I STARTED I COULD CARRY IT WITH ONE HAND!
THERE'S NOTHING BEEN PUT IN IT,— THE MOUTH OF THE BAG IS SEALED TIGHT!
I SEE YOU WERE CAUGHT IN THE RAIN! THE BAG IS WET!
YES, BUT I DIDN'T GET WET. I HELD THE BAG OVER MY HEAD!
IT WAS SOON AFTER THE SHOWER THAT YOU NOTICED THE ENORMOUS INCREASE IN WEIGHT, WAS IT NOT?
COME TO THINK OF IT— YOU'RE RIGHT!
WELL, MR. SHRIMPO, YOU'D BETTER HIRE A TRUCK TO TAKE THAT BAG OF SPONGES TO THE STORE— THEY'VE SOAKED UP TEN TIMES THEIR WEIGHT IN WATER!
SPONGES, HA! THAT'S ONE ON YOU, SHRIMPO!

The Incident Is Closed

The opponents of the Democratic party have been watching with dismay the HARMONY which has subsisted within the party since Governor Foss's election and since the great increase of Democratic representation in the Legislature.

They have seen the Democrats in the Legislature exercise a HEALTHY INDEPENDENCE of the dominance of the Governor on those important matters concerning which their own convictions are strong, while yet preserving the CLOSEST ALLIANCE with the Governor, and according to him that predominance of influence which constitutes a healthy leadership without the servility which would make him a "boss."

The enemies of the party have viewed with alarm the growing popular approval of this evidence of PARTY EFFICIENCY. It was to break up the harmonious co-operation among the leaders of the Democratic party that the question of the appointment of a police commissioner was seized upon by those who seek to sow the seeds of discord in the party by disturbing the friendly relations between the Governor and the Mayor of Boston.

Concerning the police commissioner, the Governor's problem was a hard one, and he has exercised his best judgment. The RESPONSIBILITY was his, and he has ASSUMED IT WITH COURAGE. The AMERICAN, alone of the Boston press, has not attempted to bias the Governor's judgment.

The question whether Mr. O'Meara should be reappointed, or another as good or better man should take his place, was unimportant. No vital principle was involved; no public rights were about to be given away or preserved. It did not affect the rights or the condition of the great body of wage earners in the State.

The demand of his friends for the reappointment of Mr. O'Meara was not like the demand of a public service corporation for a fifty-year lease of our great highways. It was not like the demand of a railroad for the right to suppress competition or to force upon our savings banks unsafe railroad securities.

The friends of Mr. O'Meara are properly gratified, but that greater number of less ingenuous individuals who seized upon the incident as an opportunity to cause trouble between the two most important offices in the control of the Democratic party, must now be sorely disappointed at the futility of these designs.

Mr. Fitzgerald has accepted the Governor's decision on a matter over which the Governor had exclusive jurisdiction, even as he would have expected the Governor to yield to his decision on a matter which fell entirely within the Mayor's authority and duty.

Mayor Fitzgerald had his views, and he had a right to express them. But now the "INCIDENT IS CLOSED," in Mr. Fitzgerald's fitting words.

Those who thought they could use the Mayor to hurt his own party on so small a matter as the police commissionership have yet to obtain even an approximate notion of the Mayor's measure.

The Sunday American's Special Commissioner to Ireland

C. O'CONNELL GALVIN'S first article on the great fight being made in Ireland and England for Irish Home Rule will appear in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Mr. Galvin was sent to the Old Country especially to write these articles and he reached London in time to get material for a brilliant description of the exciting scenes that attended the debate in Parliament on the Veto Bill.

From London Mr. Galvin went to Manchester and inspected the great ship canal, of which he will write in the future. It was an interesting moment—one that thrilled Mr. Galvin and filled him with eloquence—when he stepped ashore on Irish soil.

Every lover of Ireland will want to read what Mr. Galvin writes in this connection.

Since reaching the other side Mr. Galvin has met socially and chatted with many prominent men, who have been glad to furnish for readers of the Sunday AMERICAN a truthful inside story of what is going on in these epoch-making days in Ireland.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About Optimists and Pessimists

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THARE is the dearest little gurl cumming up to the house tonite, sed Ma, she is jest married, & tho I have never met her husband, I am sure he must be as nice as she is. She has the sunniest temper, she is always a optimist. Does she live in Boston? sed Pa. No, sed Ma, in Deetroit. I thought so, sed Pa. It is very hard indeed to be a optimist & live in Boston. I dount like optimists anyway, sed Pa. I like pessimists.

Just then Mister & Missus Warner calm. She was all the time laffing & giggling, like the littel gurls down to the skool, but her husband never laffed at all. He had a very long face, & all he sed at first was yes & no. He was a pessimist, & Pa gave him a cigar the first thing & took him to the library, too, where the sideboard is.

Wen they calm back out Missus Warner sed to Ma & the rest of us What a lustful world this is, to be sure. The world is funny & grate & sparkling & full of sunshine. Dount you think so? she sed to Pa. I didnt notice, sed Pa. But dount think that peepul have so much good in them, & that we ought to laugh like littel children from the sheer joy of living?

I cant say how it is with you, sed Pa, but wen I try lafing like littel children my wife always looks at me kind of suspishus & says sumthing about men stopping off at places on the way hoam. You are rite, sed Mister Warner, thare aint much to laff at. I had to pay my insurance today, & next week is rent week. I hope the landlord is a optimist, sed Mister Warner, beekuss I guess I will have to stall him a littel.

Life is a lustful thing, sed Ma. I think Missus Warner is rite. As Sir Walter Scott sed. As we jurney thru life let us sing joy to the house toutts, sed Ma, for we never sed it, sed Mister Warner. It was Tom Moore that sed it. I saw it on a cigar sign. This is rotten weather, dont it? I have had a fereest cold for a week. This climate aint fit for a dog to live in.

Have you got a cold, did you say? sed Pa. Cum rite in here & try a littel of my coff medicine. So they went back to the library ageenn & dident cum out for five mintes. While they was gone his wife sed to Ma, You must not mind my husband. Beneath his ruff exteerior thare is a grate deel concealed, but Ma, thare is a grate deal concealed beneeth my husband's ruff exteerior, too, more than you you wud ever dreem of. Bobbie, sed Ma, tell yure father that thare is a perrible draft in the library & that he & his frend must cum rite out.

Then Mister Warner & Pa calm out. Mister Warner dident have such a long face that time. It isent a bad old world, after all, he sed. Things look awful blue sumtimes, but I have always found out that sooner or later it brakes the other way. What a butiful sunset, sed Mister Warner. Dount you think I have a butiful bride? he asked Ma.

Then Missus Warner beegun to look funny at him, the same way I have saw Ma look at Pa. It seems to me, she sed, that you have changed yure mind very quick.

Then a funny thing happened. Three moor times Pa & Mister Warner went into the library & wen the two visitors was reddy to go Mister Warner was a optimist & Missus Warner was a pessimist.

I guess most peepul has been both optimists & pessimists sumtimes.
